"L" BILL HAS FIRST READING

The Boston Elevated West End lease bill was given its first reading in the Senate this afternoon. There was little debate and the bill was placed on the calendar for to-morrow for its second reading and the question will be on passing it to its third reading.

The AMERICAN'S long fight for better transit for Boston and against a holdup by either the Elevated or the West End is over. Conferences between Foss, for the people, Robert Winsor, for the Elevated, and Louis D. Brandeis, for the Public Franchise League, have resulted in practically insuring a clean track for the substitute measures and, despite the opposition of the few West End stockholders, who are holding out for an 8 per cent. dividend as the price of consolidation, the impression at the State House to-day clearly favorable to the bills.

Tinkham Tells Plans.

Senator Tinkham, who has been a leader in the fight against the West End holdup, said:

"The two bills, offered as substitutes for the so-called 'omnibus bill,' one providing for the construction and leasing of new subways and tunnels in Boston and the other for the future consolidation of the Elevated and the West End, will be considered in the Senate to-day, and I have no question but that the action will be favorable.

"I shall offer several amendments to the Elevated-West End consolidation bill. Most of them will be merely perfecting in their nature and intended to make absolutely clear the meaning and intent of the measure wherever there is now any possible doubt. But I shall also offer as amendments two entirely new sections. These sections are in line with the policy of offering every reasonable concession to the West End stockholders which does not affect any principle at stake.

"The first of these new sections will give the holders of West End preferred and common stock, and after consolidation

BABIES SUFFER IN MILK FAMINE

Boston's milk famine became more alarming to-day than at any time since the scarcity began a week ago. In many of the poorer sections of the city ten cents, and sometimes higher prices were demanded for milk. These extortionate prices were paid by poor mothers who were forced to get milk at any sacrifice for their children.

The most suffering from lack of milk was found in South Boston and the North, West and South Ends of Boston. At times when a poor mother was able to get some milk after a long search in the killing heat she found that it was more water than milk.

Small dealers reported that they were not able to get enough milk to meet the demands. The Hood Milk Company officials said to-day that they were making every effort possible to increase their supply and that they were making two and three trips a day to the poorer sections in order to alleviate suffering among the babies.

Milk Prices Soar.

Acting Mayor Collins took the milk situation up again to-day and made an effort to get relief.

In South Boston, from Dorchester avenue through to A street, B, C and D streets, from Second to Eighth streets, the price of milk had gone up. William Conley of No. 143 E street found it impossible to get milk anywhere in his locality. At last he found a place on Broadway.

A reporter found Mrs. Cornelius Curtin

HUNT BURGLAR WHO SHOT MAN

BRANDON, Vt., July 10.—Thomas Rogers, a prominent contractor, was shot in his home in this town by a burglar at 3 a. m. to-day, and is now lying unconscious and in a serious condition.

Mr. Rogers was aroused by a noise made by the burglar and left his bed to investigate. When he found the housebreaker he tried to capture the intruder, and there was a desperate struggle. The burglar did not hesitate to risk murder to escape, and shot Mr. Rogers twice.

The wounded contractor, with two bullets in the region of the hip, had to relax his hold. He fell to the floor and the burglar got out of the house and has not been caught. A posse is in pursuit, and farmers and everybody else in the vicinity of Brandon are watching for a bareheaded and shoeless stranger. He left his hat and shoes in Mr. Rogers's house. It is believed that Mr. Rogers wounded the housebreaker, for the latter was tracked for some distance by a trail of blood.

HOTTEST DAY EVER KNOWN IN BROCKTON

BROCKTON, July 10.—To-day is the hottest ever recorded, the glass at City Hall registering 101 at noon. Shoe factories opened up new runs to-day and the men must work. Last week all of the large factories closed during the torrid wave, but the men and women were compelled to remain at their benches to-day.

The shoe workers' loss last week on account of the heat is estimated at $10,000.

ROCKEFELLER HOT, BUT COULDN'T BUY FANS IN CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, July 10.—John D. Rockefeller had to suffer and swelter during the hot spell because he could not buy an electric fan. The money needed for the fans was there, or, if necessary, many Cleveland merchants would doubtless have sent a supply to his Forest Hill home on credit. But there was none on hand, and as a result the richest man in the world was compelled to spend the hot nights far from the pleasing whirr of the swiftly revolving blades until six fans were obtained and sent to him several days after his order.

MRS. JENKINS ILL; JURY WAITS

NEW YORK, July 10.—The intense heat, combined with the nervous strain to which she has been subjected, to-day caused the collapse of Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins, who has been the government's most important witness before the Grand Jury in the investigation of the smuggling of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of jewels into this country. Mrs. Jenkins was to have continued her revelations to the Grand Jury to-day, but was confined to her bed.

BOAT CRIPPLED WITH 350 BABIES

The Penal Institutions steamer, Monitor, carrying 350 children from the parish of St. Stephens in the North End, on their way for a day's outing at Bumkin Island, broke down to-day in Hull Gut, off Pemberton and was unable to proceed on its journey.

One of the rods of the paddlewheels snapped and the steamer came to a standstill. There was considerable confusion and it required the watchful attention of those in charge of the outing to prevent the boys and girls from flying into a panic.

After an investigation of the break, it was found necessary to put back, and the boat, running under half steam, put in at Deer Island.

The boat docked at Deer Island about noon, when the prisoners were at dinner. The little folks hopped ashore, and in a short time they were served with dinner. Then they climbed back on the boat.

Returned to Dock at 1:30.

The Monitor then headed back to her dock at East Boston, where she arrived at 1:30 this afternoon.

Accompanying the children was the Rev. Father Leo J. Knapp of St. Stephen's Church. William A. Boudrot, assistant penal institutions commissioner, was also along.

When the boat stopped in Hull Gut, a narrow channel, there was considerable excitement. The children became aware that something was wrong and when the vessel turned around and slowly limped toward Deer Island some of the little folk were inclined to break into tears.

POTHIER STOPS RACE GAMBLING

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 10.—Governor Pothier to-day ordered that pool selling be stopped at the horse races at Woonsocket. The races were to start this afternoon and last five days. Because of the order, the race track officials have called the races off.

To-day's action is largely due to the Sunday AMERICAN'S campaign to stop gambling in Rhode Island. Acknowledgement of his indebtedness to the AMERICAN for information as to law-breaking and gambling at Rhode Island was made by Governor Pothier in last Sunday's AMERICAN.

Governor Pothier to-day notified Sheriff Wilcox to go to Woonsocket and to see that no pool-selling and gambling take place there. The sheriff notified the race track officials that the order would be enforced to the letter.

WIRE TRUST MEN PLEAD NOT GUILTY

NEW YORK, July 10.—Thirty men, representing wealth estimated at $100,000,000, stood sweltering in the United States Circuit Court before Judge Archbald to-day and pleaded not guilty to the charge of forming the Steel Wire Trust and operating it in restraint of trade. Herbert L. Satterlee, son-in-law of J. Pierpont Morgan, was the most conspicuous of the prisoners. He and the twenty-nine others were held in $1,000 bail each for trial, the date to be set later. Frank Jay Gould will plead on his return to New York from abroad.

THREE LUNATICS BREAK FROM CELLS

PROVIDENCE, July 10.—Police all over Rhode Island are on the lookout for three lunatics who escaped from the State Hospital for the Insane early to-day. The lunatics, Charles Booth, Albert Pierce and William Kendall, are all dangerous, especially Kendall, who has a mania for killing. The hospital authorities believe that there was a concerted plot for a general outbreak due to the hot weather. It is thought the fugitives are hiding somewhere in the vicinity of Providence.

UNIDENTIFIED BOY KILLED BY A TRAIN

An unknown boy, about thirteen years old, was struck and killed this afternoon by a Boston & Maine train near the Forbes lithograph works in Chelsea. The body was so badly mangled that nobody who viewed it could see any resemblance to any boy known in the neighborhood. The body was taken to the North Grove street morgue.

NEW HOT WAVE GRIPS BOSTON

the forenoon that it was expected soon to beat the 100 mark.

With only one really cool day between this torrid visitation and the death-dealing heat of last week, which smashed all hot weather records in Boston, the residents of this city and suburban districts were not in fit condition to-day to battle with the sun's scorching rays.

Many people dropped in the street and at their work and were taken to hospitals unconscious. Many deaths were expected to-day because of the weakened condition of the people.

The early morning heat in Boston to-day was a record-breaker, the mercury reaching 87 at 8 o'clock, as against 86 at that hour on July 6. In the sun on the street at this time the mercury sizzled up to 107.

Frof 8 until 9 o'clock the mercury jumped three degrees, and during the next hour rose from 90 to 94.

But little hope was held out to-day by the weather forecaster. He predicted that it would be a little cooler to-night.

Boston was the hottest place on the map to-day. The most disgusted person in the city was a fat literary man who came up on a boat from New York last night looking for a cool spot in which to spend his vacation. When he reached the South Station, his shirt was wet. By the time he had walked up as far as the AMERICAN office in Summer street his collar had wilted, and when he was seen a little later, his peace of mind had departed.

"Whew," he ejaculated, "I thought it was cool in Boston. This is about as cool as it is in Death Valley. If I don't find a lower temperature soon I'll melt."

The New York visitor was instructed as to where he might find a cool place and he went away leaving a trail of perspiration behind him.

The weather prognosticators thought that it would probably be hot until the middle of the week when a cool wave now ambling around the Middle West might be expected to hit this city.

There was no rain in sight to-day. Bostonians hoped that the East wind would come rustling along but there was nothing to indicate that it would.

Thirty-one years ago to-day the temperature reached 101 in Boston, the hottest July 10 ever known here.

NEIL, LABOR LEADER, HELD IN $1,000 BONDS

Robert P. Neil of Mendon, well known in labor circles and the editor of a magazine published for the Brotherhood of Railroad Employes, at No. 2 Park square, was arraigned to-day before United States Commissioner Hayes on the charge of using the mails to defraud. He was held in $1,000 for a hearing on July 19. His wife gave bonds.

GAMBLERS HEED POTHIER'S HINT

NARRAGANSETT PIER, July 10.—Governor Pothier's declaration of war on gambling, following so closely on the amazing expose in the Sunday AMERICAN, have convinced the gamblers and their official allies that the game is over in this town.

"Nothing doing" was the word passed along the line yesterday at many of the resorts here. In spite of the "defiance" of Mayor Edward M. Sullivan of Cranston, there was no open gambling in that town either. The general opinion here is that Mayor Sullivan regrets having been so "sassy" in his answer to the Governor.

Newport alone of all the cities and towns in the State warned by the Governor, as told in the Sunday AMERICAN, stuck to its gambling guns on Sunday. The games were run more quietly than usual and the "look-outs" were more careful as to who they let in, but the games went on as merrily as ever.

Asked if any orders had been received from Governor Pothier in relation to closing the gambling places at Newport or if there was an change in the situation so far as the police department was concerned, Chief of Police James R. Crowley replied:

"I don't see any, do you?" Questions about gambling at Newport are annoying the Chief. One thing is certain, orders from the Governor to close up gambling at Newport are received with glad acclaim by a majority of the people."

In sporting circles it was learned that "Copey" Congdon and his interests have decided to lay low and keep quiet until the storm passes on. They regard the present crusade simply as spasmodic. "Copey" Congdon in Newport is the king of Monte Carlo. His place is now on Duke street, close to Washington square.

SUNDAY AMERICAN EXPOSURE FORCED POTHIER TO ACT

Facts relative to the gambling situation in Rhode Island have been published in the Sunday AMERICAN during the past two months, the complaints coming from citizens of the State who were averse to having the laws broken without some effort on the part of the authorities to stop it.

It was shown that the gamblers practically owned the State, or thought they did. They felt certain that the Governor would take no action, as he had said in the past that he counted upon the local authorities seeing to it that the laws were obeyed.

The Governor being out of the way, so to speak, the gamblers turned their attention to the local authorities, and in some instances it was reported they were led to think that they would have no interference from these quarters, as was duly shown in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Slattery Tells His Story.

Things were getting into shape to start the biggest gambling season in the history of the State when Mike Slattery, called "the king of the gamblers" in Rhode Island, came up to Boston and requested that a reporter of the Sunday AMERICAN be sent to his hotel so that he might have an opportunity to tell his side of the gambling situation in Rhode Island.

The reporter went to Mr. Slattery's hotel and he told how gambling was going on at various places and incidentally confessed that he was interested in the gambling places at North Providence. He followed this up with a verbal attack upon other gamblers in the State which he wrote himself and sent to the Sunday AMERICAN by a personal friend.

By the time these emanations from the gifted Mr. Slattery had reached Rhode Island through the Sunday AMERICAN the State had waked up to the fact that the gamblers were disgracing it and didn't much care who knew it.

Then a special representative of the Sunday AMERICAN went to Providence and asked Governor Pothier if he could not do something in view of the startling facts that had come to light. The result of this talk was published in last Sunday's AMERICAN.

Governor Changes Mind.

The Governor would not come out straight and say then that he would get after the gamblers and run them out of the State. Since that time, however, he has seen the matter in a different light, and yesterday he gave the gamblers notice that hey'd have to quit, through letters to eleven citeis and towns in which he called upon the local authorities to get busy and enforce the laws.

But the gamblers have not given up yet and with the Governor and his sheriffs after them as a result of the Sunday AMERICAN'S exposures, the people of Rhode Island are watching with increasing interest the bitterest war on gambling that Little Rhody ever saw.

Many letters have been sent to the Sunday AMERICAN thanking this newspaper for bringing to the attention of the people of the State the conditions with reference to gambling in Rhode Island as they really are, and commending it for putting the matter up to Governor Pothier in such manner as resulted in his taking action in the matter.

JUDGE HOOKER DROPS DEAD IN NEW YORK

AUBURN, N. Y., July 10.—Justice Frank A. Hooker of the Michigan Supreme Court dropped dead in the New York Central station here to-day as he was about to purchase a ticket to his home in Lansing, Mich. He was sixty-eight years old.

City Hall Notes

As a result of Acting Mayor Collins's letter to department heads, urging them to cut down the overtime bills, Corporation Counsel Babson has ruled that a large number of Sunday employees of the public works department be rated as seven day employees rather than as six day employees with an extra day of overtime. This change will cut down the overtime bills to a considerable extent.

Hundreds of Lives Lost By Floods in Moldavia.

VIENNA—Hundreds of lives have been lost and many millions of dollars damage done by terrific floods now raging in Moldavia, according to dispatches received from Bucharest to-day. Three towns have been overwhelmed and many villages inundated.

First Aviation Duel.

PARIS—Paul Tissandier and the Marquis Kergarion, the Journal's aviation circuit race commissioners, fought a duel at Liege, Belgium. The duel, in which some blood was drawn, was the outcome of a dispute over weather conditions when the aviators were at Liege on June 21. In the third bout with the foils Kergarion received a wound an inch deep in his right forearm.

French Plotters Arrested.

PARIS—Prominent Unionists, Messrs Vran, Drumont and Barlfond, have been arrested on the charge of organizing an anti-militarist propaganda in the army. The chief basis of the charge is that an organization known as the Soldier's Sou, which sent money to soldiers, ostensibly for assistance, did so for the purposes of the propaganda.

Paris Is Short of Baths.

PARIS—The heat wave has resulted in the discovery that the number of public and private baths in Paris is smaller than in any other city in the world. The press is clamoring for the establishment of more bathing places.

STOKES LETTER HUNT RESUMED

NEW YORK, July 10.—What began as a prosecution of Miss Lillian Graham and Miss Ethel Conrad on the charge that they tried to shoot W. E. D. Stokes, the millionaire hotel man, to death, has turned into an investigation of Stokes and detectives supposed to be working in his interest relative to the strange disappearance of some of the letters that the rich man wrote to Miss Graham.

A police scandal has already been unearthed as a result of the investigation of the case, and before the matter is ended it is expected that there will be further startling developments.

A new development to-day, in substance, is that at the proper time the defence in this case expects to support the charge that Miss Graham never received a dollar from Stokes that was not her own and to which she was not legally entitled.

In other words, the defence is expected to seek to establish as a fact that Miss Graham intrusted money of her own into Stokes's keeping, and that all of the alleged demands made upon him by her for financial aid were nothing more or less than efforts on her part to get back her money from Stokes when she was in sore need of it. There will not be any effort to show that Stokes misappropriated the money; in fact, there is not even the slightest hint of any irregularity in the handling of it.

On the other hand, the defence is absolutely certain that any such funds were administered with rigid uprightness and the purpose will be only to show that Miss Graham was legally entitled to every dollar she ever got from Stokes, thus clearing her name of any stigma of insinuation that might have attached thereto.

It is claimed that the defence will in all probability charge and seek to prove that during the early stage of Stokes's acquaintance with Miss Graham, based upon his ability as a financier, Miss Graham entrusted to him for investment a certain sum of money that had been left to her, it is understood, by one of her parents.

Miss Graham was seen about this matter and plainly showed her surprise that it had become public. She said she must stick to her attorney's instructions and not discuss the case in any detail.

"But I will say," she added, "that one of his letters to me had something in it about a matter a good deal like what you have said."

Then Miss Graham suddenly caught herself, and, appearing as though to regret her words, said:

"You really mustn't ask me anything about our case; you must see our lawyers."

As matters now stand in this case the defence seems to be more confident and smiling than at any previous time.

John Bloom, superintendent of the Varuna apartments at Broadway and Eightieth street, where W. E. D. Stokes was shot on the night of June 7, told Fourth Deputy Police Commissioner Dillon to-day that he saw five detectives open Miss Graham's trunk an hour after the shooting and examine a bundle of letters that were tied up with a pink baby ribbon. Bloom says they threw the packet into a pasteboard box, together with an assortment of loose letters, telegrams, pictures and memorandum books, and carried it out of the house.

The Business you can get to-day by wire may be gone by the time that letter gets there to-morrow.

"Day Letters" should be on your selling force.

THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY

BOSTON PARTY INSPECTS DOCKS

The varied municipal activities of the German city of Dusseldorf are being inspected by the Boston Chamber of Commerce to-day, according to a cablegram received by Secretary McKibben in Boston. Dusseldorf owns its street railroads, harbors, docks, slaughterhouses, gas, electric light and water plants; it operates three separate banking and loan enterprises, a large wine business, several restaurants and milk depots; it owns and rents suburban villas and large apartment houses; it is a great land speculator and city land owner; it possesses art galleries, an opera house, museums and exposition hall, and indirectly owns the leading hotel in the city. It has public baths and cemeteries and pawnshops.

Dusseldorf is a comparatively new city, like Cleveland, Indianapolis or Kansas City. Its population was but 69,000 people in 1871. It is now 300,000. It is located on the lower Rhine, in the heart of the industrial region that has sprung into existence since the Franco-Prussian War. It is known as one of the best governed cities in the world.

Tenants Part Owners.

The city is the owner of suburban villas and model tenement houses, and is a stockholder in a scheme of co-operative apartment houses, in which the workmen are joint owners. The country villas rent for from six to seven dollars a month. A three or four-room apartment in the city rents for about the same sum. The rooms in the latter are twice the size of the tenement houses in America, and all of them have outside air. These apartments are clean and sanitary as can be.

In order to secure an apartment in one of these desirable buildings the tenant must become a shareholder in the company, buying five dollars' worth of stock. The tenants are not recipients of charity. On the contrary, they are part owners and co-operate in the management. They elect a house manager, who collects the rents and represents them before the company. The tenant stockholders receive 4 per cent. a year on their investment.

Yesterday the party took a ride about the city and viewed the harbor developments. The cost of these improvements was $4,500,000. In ten years' time this improvement has increased the river trade by 300 per cent., while the cost of the harbor is being paid by the dues and rents from its use.

Big Harbor Improvements.

Dusseldorf was not a natural harbor. The water front, which extends for miles along the Rhine, was low-lying land. The bank opposite the city was covered with shacks and huts, which were torn down and the land developed into a beautiful parkway several miles in extent.

The city side was reclaimed from the river and confined with stone embankments. A wide esplanade was constructed, upon which several great public buildings as well as a splendid exposition building have been erected.

Father up the river a system of docks was constructed, with powerful cranes which handle all kinds of freight at an insignificant cost. The remarkable thing about this undertaking is the way business is made to harmonize with art and beauty. The use of the river front for recreation is not impaired by the docks and railway tracks.

WAR ON OWNERS OF MOTOR BOATS

Assistant United States District Attorney Garland filed informations against twenty-five motor boat owners in the United States District Court to-day, alleging that they had not equipped their craft with proper materials. Revenue cutters have reported that all alongshore motor boat men are neglecting to carry sand or anything else to put out gasoline fires.

The complaints came from the collectors of the ports of Boston, Marblehead and New Bedford. Owners who are complained of will get a notice and a letter, asking them to appear before Judge Dodge in the United States District Court on Tuesday next. This is the beginning of a campaign to enforce motor boat laws.

MILK SHORTAGE GROWS WORSE

of No. 70 A street in need of milk for her baby. It was supplied after a long walk to find a store with a supply. Children from two to five years of age are seen on the streets going from one grocery store to another pleading for milk.

Mrs. Della Tevin of No. 106 Broadway, said that she had tried in vain to get milk for her sick child and was obliged to use, for the last three days, condensed milk. She said that she would not pay ten cents for watered milk.

One thing is in evidence over in the different sections of South Boston. Some stores are selling milk at 7 cents a quart, and others at 8 cents. Many of them are selling at 9 cents, and not a few at 15 cents a quart. There are a few touching cases which came to light in the store of Isaac Fischer, No. 118 Fouth street.

Poor Aid the Poor.

"I was so touched by the way that a woman came in here last Saturday for milk for her child that I gave her one half pint of milk and kept the other half for my own child," said Mr. Fischer. "I understand that a great many people around here have exchanged milk with one another. Somehow or other a few families can get two quarts while another family people hear of needy cases and when these people hear of needy cases they are willing to share the milk with one another.

"This has been the way with some of the most urgent needs of babies in this locality have been met. You cannot get much satisfaction out of the milk dealer. When you tell him that you want more milk, he simply says, 'I have orders not to give it to you. I must make it go as far as I can in this locality.' When I tell him that we want it for the little suffering babies it does not seem to make much difference."

H. P. Hood & Sons Company emphatically disclaim any responsibility for the shortage of milk in South Boston or any other section of the city, asserting that they are sending more milk into the tenement house districts to protect the babies of the poor than at any time since they went into business. Their statement follows:

"We are sending more milk to South Boston, the North End, and the West End than we ever sent to those districts before in an endeavor to supply the babies. In some instances our teams are making two and three trips a day to these working-class districts, where before this hot wave they only made one trip.

Work Teams Overtime.

"On July 4, for instance, we had our teams make three trips to the West End so that the children of the poor might not suffer for lack of milk. If any retailer has raised the price of milk, or hasn't enough to supply his customers, he is responsible, not the wholesaler, so far as this company is concerned.

"If there were a shortage of milk, which there is not, we should not cut off the babies of the poor. The hotels and restaurants could manage to get along without fresh milk, but the children cannot."

AD MEN GO TO BRETTON WOODS

BURLINGTON, Vt., July 10.—It was rather disapointing to the members of the American Golf Association of Advertising Interests who had planned on playing in the championship tourney of this organization at Hotel Champlain, Bluff Point, N. Y., from Monday to Saturday this week, to find the course was too short and that all could not be accommodated at once. Lack of rain had left the course in poor shape, and so it was decided to transfer the tournament to Bretton Woods, where it has been held the past two years.

A large number of the members with their families spent the week end at Lake Champlain, arriving by various routes from all over the country.

T. M. Sherman, the son of the Vice-President of the United States, and present champion, started for Bretton Woods with E. C. Longley of Bretton Woods, V. C. Longley of Providence, and R. J. Allyn of Hartford, John Shepard, Jr., and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Crocker of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Whitman of Boston and E. H. Fitler and C. G. Dixon of Philadelphia, were among the number of motorists of the road to Bretton Woods. One of the members of the association, J. H. Ottley of New York, chartered a special train from Burlington to Bretton Woods and the entire party left Bluff Point by boat to-day to reach Bretton Woods in time for a putting tournament this afternoon.

KERSHAW STILL FAST ON SHOAL

CHATHAM, July 10.—Unable to float the big Merchant & Miner's line steamer Kershaw, which is ashore on Shovelful rip, off Monomoy Point, about half a mile from the beach, last night, the wreckers are ready to make another attempt at high tide to-day. All night a volunteer crew from this place has been at work with the steamer's regular crew and the aid sent from Boston, lightering the cargo, in the hope that powerful tugs aided by the steamer's own power may cause her to slide off the sand bar at 10:30 to-day, when the tide is at flood.

The steamer's passengers are still on board and there is no danger unless an easterly storm comes up, of which there is no indication to-day.

The Kershaw left Boston last evening and when off Chatham at midnight a heavy fog shut in. Captain Johnson made the two Pollock rip lightships and then shaped his course for the Shovelful, running at half speed.

His time being up and hearing nothing of the bell on the Shovelful lightship, Captain Johnson slowed down almost to a stop when suddenly the Kershaw fetched up on the bottom with an easy jar. This was about 1 o'clock this morning.

When the fog cleared just before daybreak Captain Johnson discovered that he had passed the lightship without hearing her bell at all.

MILLBURY MEN GET GEMS BACK

MILBURY, July 10.—This town is all stirred up on hearing the real story of the bold, bad man who disarmed Chief of Police Dolan, State Officer Robert E. Molt and Selectman J. F. Lyons, all at once, when they had trailed him by his rubber footprints in the dust in true Sherlock style, only to be confronted by the evil-doer who promptly disarmed the three and walked off with their weopons. Then after 100 citizens, all armed to the teeth had started on the man's trail, he calmly walked back into town and gave himself up.

Many citizens who have lost valuables in recent holdups in this vicinity went to Worcester to-day where Frank Beaudry, aged thirty-five, and John Morah, twenty-one, the alleged bad men, were arraigned in the Criminal District Court on charges of breaking and entering. Beaudry is the man, whom the police say, disarmed not only Millbury's chief of police but a State officer, and just to give full measure, took away the arms of a selectman and then told them to go home and be good or he would shoot them. They were good and didn't get shot. Frank L. Beaudry was sentenced to eighteen months in the House of Correction; John O'Mara got a six months' sentence, and Edward Beaudry's case was continued until Wednesday.

Disarmed Fearless Chief.

Citizens here are wondering what chance they would have against such a desperate man when their brave and fearless chief, their State officer in whose achievements they have taken great pride, and their leading town father, can be unanimously disarmed and told to be good, by a man acting single-handed.

"When asked to explain how it was that Beaudry disarmed the three officers at the same time, State Officer Molt said: "He is about the best-armed person I ever caught. It is the most startling capture in Worcester County for years and we did well to catch him without someone being popped.

"I thought when we started after him that someone would be shot. He was a desperate man, I know, as I was in front of him in the kitchen, but he quit when he saw the posse from the hill. I am glad we caught him without shots being fired by either side."

When asked to explain how the police captured him when Beaudry came out of the woods and surrendered himself voluntarily, Mr. Molt explained that it amounted to the same thing as the man couldn't escape the vigilance of the police for long.

Would Have Given Ten.

Officer Dolan, who was also disarmed, said: "He made me cough up before those two revolvers. I would have coughed up ten other revolvers if I had them. He had the drop on us, because we were in the other side of the room and could not see or hear him, with sneakers on, aproaching the other door. He had us like rats in a trap. I lifted up a chair to hit him, but his mother stepped in between us and told me to put it down or he would shoot sure. We were like little kittens before him. He is a professional cracksman, that is my opinion of him."

That the officers were pretty well scared by Beaudry is admitted by them.

Awakened at 3 a. m. by a commotion outside his home, Selectman J. F. Lyons saw two men escape from the office of the Coulter Coal and Lumber Company on River street, near his dwelling. A dog owned by Mr. Lyons began barking at the men and one of them shot the animal dead.

Mr. Lyons lost no time in notifying Chief of Police Dolan and State Officer Molt, the latter being at his home in this town. The three men armed themselves with revolvers and tracked the men by the prints of their rubber shoes in the dust.

They found Morah at home, and he was arrested without a struggle. They next went to Beaudry's home.

Took Away Their Arms.

While they were searching the dwelling Beaudry suddenly appeared. Covering the three officials with his revolver he threatened to shoot them unless they gave up their weapons. All three surrendered their firearms.

Keeping the three covered Beaudry procured a supply of food. Then, taking two revolvers, he backed out of the house, declaring that he would shoot to kill anyone who attempted to follow. He then made off to some woods near by.

Within a short time more than 100 men, armed with revolvers, shotguns, rifles or other weapons, started in search of Beaudry.

Shortly before noon Beaudry caused another surprise by appearing at his home and surrendering himself. He declared that there were so many persons searching for him that he realized he would not be able to conceal himself and could resist only for a short time.

SPEEDY ACTION ON SHARK BILL

The Tinkham-Cavanagh anti-loan-shark bill is given its first reading in the Senate to-day. If pushed through the upper chamber with the speed that marked its passage through the House, it should reach the Governor by Thursday at the very latest.

Senator George Holden Tinkham of Boston is now in charge of the measure. That he will brook no delay is indicated by his ringing declaration, published exclusively in the AMERICAN, that "it will be political suicide for any man to attempt to play the loan-shark's game by blocking the passage of this bill or plugging it with amendments."

Following the startling expose of loan-shark methods by the Sunday AMERICAN two weeks ago, he asserts, the demand for effective regulation of the money-lender evil has become so State-wide that it is unsafe to run counter to the wishes of the people in this respect. He looks for the enactment of the present bill in its entirety, without any serious opposition.

Money Lenders Now Plead.

The loan sharks to-day are in desperate straights. From open bluster, they have descended to a plea for sympathy. They declare, to a man, that the Tinkham-Cavanagh bill will make the small-loan business so unprofitable that they will be compelled to suspend, if it becomes a law. And that despite the fact that it permits them to charge 36 per cent interest a year on all such loans effected.

The same men who, before the Sunday AMERICAN expose, hounded young William A. Taylor of South Boston to a suicide's grave by compelling him to pay $45 interest on a $5 loan, and still claimed he owed them $7, are to-day pleading for a little of the leniency they refused to show him.

"We don't want any hard-luck stories! Pay up or we'll trustee your husband's wages. This shoes-for-children story doesn't cut any figure. Pay up, or we'll sell you out, shoes or no shoes!" and all such familiar loan-shark expressions, have given way to supplications for mercy on their own behalf on Beacon Hill to-day.

Death Knell of Sharks.

Representative Cavanagh of Everett, who, as chairman of the Committee on Banks and Banking took charge of the bill in the House and drove it through in record-breaking time, is in daily receipt of letters from the terrified loan-sharks.

"You may be interested to learn," one of them writes, "that if the loan-bill your committee has introduced becomes a law in its present shape, it will absolutely do away with licensed money lenders in Boston. Let me explain."

But the explanation that follows this introduction, while skilfully put together, is so typical of money-lender methods that it has not changed the determination of either Representative Cavanagh or Senator Tinkham to push the bill complained of through in its present form. It is nothing new for them to be told that a 36 per cent. rate of interest is too low for the loan sharks. It was the common plea made by the money lenders before the legislative committee.

James W. Waters, manager of the Legal Loan Company, thinks it is all right to charge a man $200 interest on a four-year loan of $75, and still leave the man in debt for the sum originally borrowed. But, he reluctantly admits, he didn't hold that view before he went into the money-lending business.

This unwilling admission was dragged out of Mr. Waters by the Committee on Banks and Banking, while under oath, during the course of the loan-shark investigation ordered by the Legislature. The Legal Loan Company was under fire at the time. He was being grilled by Representative Cavanagh for that committee. His statement is held to be even more important to-day than at the time it was made, showing, as it does, just what the money-lender point-of-view is as regards a legitimate rate of interest.

His Views Changed.

Mr. Waters had been subjected to a heavy cross-fire before this particular series of questions was put to him. He was becoming somewhat confused, in fact, which in part may account for the damaging admission being made. This is the testimony:

Question—Sixty dollars a year on $75 loaned?

Answer, by Waters—Yes, sir.

Q.—Is it true that he paid you $200 in interest?

A.—I could not say.

Q.—If he did, he still owed the $75?

A.—Yes, sir; if he did.

Q.—Do you defend that kind of business? Do you think that is a good business so far as the public is concerned, if a fellow should pay $200 of interest on a $75 loan he would still owe the principal?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Do you think that is perfectly right, using you right and using the public right

A.—Yes, sir. I DIDN'T BEFORE I WENT INTO THE BUSINESS, BUT I DO NOW!

This is the sworn statement of the manager of the Legal Loan Company. It shows just how the average money-lender looks upon the usury-evil—after he has been connected with the business a few years.

he legislator who, under other conditions, might be inclined to forget the past, the friends of the Tinkham-Cavanagh bill say, can't ignore the fact that $200 is the loan-shark conception of a fair interest on $75, under the present method of doing business

TAFT RETURNS FROM SEA TRIP

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Wearing a hadsome coat of tan that had been acquired by their two-day yachting trip from Philadelphia and around the Capes, President Taft and his senatorial guests arrived on the Mayflower today. The President looked as if the rest from the excessive heat which prevailed on shore when he left had done him much good.

COWGIRL LAUDS ELEONORA SEARS

Nan Aspinwall, the pretty young Western girl who has just completed a hirseback ride from San Francisco to New York, is to ride to Newport, and she may ride on to Boston. She wants to meet Eleonora Sears, Boston's own society girl athlete. Miss Aspinwall says:

"I want to meet Eleonora Sears. I think she is the one real, honest-to-God cowgirl of the East. She would have been a dandy if she hadn't been born in society. She's full of spunk."

Except for Miss Sears, Miss Aspinwall doesn't think much of Eastern girls. She says:

"Eastern women are too much homebodies. They get fat too quickly. Too much high-brow talk—that's the trouble. Highbrow talk is a great fatmaker."

Lariat for the Fat.

The young girl who has just completed the longest horseback ride ever undertaken by man or woman is to come to Newport to teach Eastern women lariat throwing. She says it is a great fat reducer.

"Relief from fat," says the girl rider, "lies not in massage parlors, or beauty treatments, or rolling or water drinking or fasting, but in fun and out-of-door exercise. You know you cannot reduce fat permanently without making muscle, and my stunt is to make muscle for these ladies who have got all run down from dances and teas and highbrow talk. Believe me, highbrow talk is a terrific weight maker.

"As for riding reducing weight, you can't beat it. I went out on the bridle path in Central Park, New York, and I was dumfounded at what you Easterners call 'riding.' Most of the men and women stick up like sticks and don't half enjoy the movement of the horse. I'd just like to stay here long enough to give those people a chance at some real pleasure.

"Another reason I am anxious to get to Newport, is that I'll have a chance to meet Miss Eleonora Sears. I think she is the one real, honest-to-God cowgirl of the East. She would have been a dandy if she hadn't been born in society, for she's full of spunk."

Proud of Montana.

Miss Aspinwall is a Montana girl, and she is proud of it. She thinks the East lawless compared with the West, and as for New York, "it's vicious," she says, adding:

"Why, I'll tell you there's more shooting in New York in one week than there is in the whole State of Montana in a year. Out West we don't have the hold-ups and murders you do here. They happen, but not often. We're decent, law-abiding citizens out there, even if we do wear red shirts and cowhide boots. We have respect for law and order."

Miss Aspinwall started East on her pony, "Lady Aspinwall," on September 1. She had a hard trip, especially in the Colorado desert, where she lost her way, and was for two days and nights without food and water. She was picked up by some prospectors and her life was saved. Later she plans to go to Europe to give riding and lariat throwing exhibitions.

WIRE WOOING HAS CLIMAX

A Waltham fireman and a Watertown girl who is a "hello" operator in the former city had a romance which culminated in their being married in Nashua, N. H., a week ago and the news just came out today.

The bride was Miss Mary J. Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Murphy of No. 42 Pleasant street, Watertown, and the bridegroom is Lieutenant Roy A. Caswell of Engine 2, Waltham fire department.

They will be back at the end of the week, when Lieut. Caswell's vacation ends.

Miss Murphy was a night operator in the Waltham telephone exchange. That is how she came to get acquainted with her future husband. Their courtship was conducted largely by wire, and it is surmised that she never said to him, "ring off, the line is busy."

About ten days ago Miss Murphy told her parents she was going to visit relatives in Millbury, Mass. She stayed with them a few days and got to Nashua in time to meet Lieutenant Caswell there on July 3. They were married on that day.

HOT WEATHER PLEA FOR THE POLICEMEN

Editor The AMERICAN:

Why subject our policemen to those heat-proof coats in such weather as this? alpaca?

Buttoned up to the neck, shutting off air and ventilation to a heated body that during the sweltering heat of the Summer should have relief, these garments are a torture.

Why not an open front coat or one of alpacca?

To hold to the traditions of a uniform coat that must be worn is inhuman and barbarous. Let us awake to the need of being humane.

Our policemen have feelings akin to all human beings. We succor the horse and protect him from the rays of the sun. Why not the policemen?

COOK ATTACK UPON WARREN

Sherwin L. Cook, a prominent Boston attorney and a progressive Republican, who took the stump for Foss last Fall, in a letter to the Governor to-day declared that the reappointment of Chairman Charles Warren of the Civil Service Commission, as the Governor has intimated he proposes to do, will be a violation of home rule.

"I earnestly trust," wrote Mr. Cook, "that you may avoid making the first great mistake of your administration in this matter."

Mr. Cook advocates the appointment of a Boston man for the position. In the course of his letter Mr. Cook says:

Hon. Eugene N. Foss, Governor,
Boston, Mass.

My Dear Governor Foss—I have just read in to-day's papers what purports to be a statement from you to the effect that you intend, unless the Boston Democracy can furnish you a better man, to reappoint Chairman Warren of the Civil Service Commission. As a firm, unselfish and consistent supporter, I hope you will allow me to remonstrate against such an act.

Last Fall the Democratic party in its platform pledged itself to oppose the re-election to the American Senate of Henry Cabot Lodge. When the test came two State Senators disregarded the party pledge on which they had been elected and were justly condemned for that act both by the press and public opinion.

Pledged to Home Rule.

Th same platform pledged itself to home rule for Boston and some weeks since you lived up to this pledge by vetoing an otherwise unobjectionable bill providing for the raising of the meagre salary of a very deserving bod yof oston teachers. This was a courageous and honest thing to do, provided the impulse which called it forth is consistently obeyed, otherwise it becomes merely a ruthless act which put the just deserts of worthy women temporarily in jeopardy.

The Civil Service Commission is the court of last resort, to which go the appointments of the mayor of this city. No possible regard for home rule can exist without recognizing that at least one member of that commission should be one of the seven hundred thousand citizens of Boston who have a legal right to take a proprietary interest in the welfare of our city.

Motives of men are not always visible and motive is the only thing which would separate this appointment from the vote of Messrs. Murray and Curley on the senatorship. Both, in my opinion, would equally violate platform pledges.

Perhaps the Boston Democracy has not presented the right man for the place. What of that? As I have said, there are nearly seven hundred thousand citizens in this great city. Surely there is at least one, even if he is not backed by the Boston Democracy, who is the equal of Mr. Warren.

Rebels at "Narrowness."

After all, it would be better if he were not so indorsed. No man should go upon that board merely to do the bidding of City Hall, but it is equally true that no man should hold that position who considers an apolntment prima facie unfit merely because it is made by Mayor Fitzgerald. oS far that has been the entire attinde of this commission. I am not a supporter of Mr. Fitzgerald—I have never yet voted for him—but as a citizen of Boston I rebel at the contemptible narrowness of this attitude which has been apparent to all for the past year and a half.

It is the duty of this commission to pass on the Mayor's appointments from the standpoint of fitness as shown by education, training or experience. The Mayor appointed Mr. Welch Water commissioner. He had seen years of service in that department and stood high on the commission's own lists for promotion. Was he not qualified by training and experience? He was rejected.

I earnestly trust that you may avoid making the first great mistake of your administratio nin this matter. You are big enough to steer between the Scylla of henchmanism and the Charybdis of an incumbent as warm as an iceberg and as broad as the edge of a razor. I am aware that the failure to reappoint Mr. Warren will disappoint every political Pharisee in the State. No matter how excellent a new appointment may be, there are those who will say that it was made at the dictation of Mayor Fitzgerald. You, however, are not a man to be moved by false criticism. This State has learned the lesson taught by its foolish defeat of Governor Bates, and the surest road to victory is to accept unjust abuse unflinchingly. If what the Mayor asks is right, it should be given him, even if in some quarters itt is unfashionable to credit him with a single decent act or motive.

Hopes to See Courage.

I hope to see you show the same courage in this appointment that you have in your messages and vetoes, and stand by the ground you took in the teachers' salary bill.

Sincerely your friend,
SHERWIN L. COOK.

COLT TOO GAY, DECLARES ETHEL

Russell Griswold Colt has "been too gay all the way through." That, it is declared, is the cause of the divorce proceedings to be brought against him by Ethel Barrymore Colt, the actress, and not, as Colt is reported as saying in New York, that he has been "drinking too much."

It was expected that the papers, drawn in California where Miss Barrymore is appearing at a Los Angeles theatre, would reach New York and be filed to-day.

Dispatches from Los Angeles say that Miss Barrymore will cut short her Pacific Slope tour and hurry back to New York to prosecute her suit for divorce. Her little son, Samuel Colt, is in New York.

The young mother expressed a fixed determination not to be separated again from her child while the boy is in his infancy. He will be two years old in November and, in all probability, if Miss Barrymore goes on another tour next season she will take the little one and his nurse with her. She does not purpose to give up the stage. Neither does she plan going away from her son.

Miss Barrymore considers that she does not need money. Her contract calls for $500 per week and 10 percent. of the net receipts. It covers another year or two during which she is scheduled to appear in several new plays. In this time she expects to be able to bank a large amount for the benefit of her child. Her husband receives an income of $800 per month from a fund settled upon his mother when she and Colonel Colt were divorced. This fund is at the mother's command. She can cut down Russell's income at any time she sees fit.

Russell has an interest in a New York brokerage firm, for which his father paid $100,000, but his income from the stock brokerage firm is said to be only nominal. For this reason Miss Barrymore, it is understood, will not ask for alimony.

Friends of Miss Barrymore declare that what first piqued and chagrined her was information that her husband was seeking more and more the company of her closest chum, a celebrated beauty of the stage. Mr. Colt's alleged philanderings with her chum are not thought, however, to have furnished her the legal ground required for divorce in New York.

Miss Barrymore's manager, B. Frank, said:

"I am requested by Miss Barrymore not to discuss her private affairs, but I will say, as she would say had she seen you, that the divorce papers are now on their way to New York and the articles which have appeared in the newspapers are correct."

GAIN IN REAL ESTATE TRADE

Transactions of all kinds in the real estate field in Suffolk county the past week showed a good gain over those for the corresponding week of last year. The following table, compiled by the Boston Real Estate Exchange, gives the following entries of record at the Suffolk registry for the week ending July 8:

	1911	1910	1909
No. of Transfers....	384	372	390
No. of Mortgs......	166	153	180
Amt. of Mortgs....	$6,741,309	$653,455	$826,265

The appended table, also compiled by the Boston Real Estate Exchange, gives in detail each day's transactions for the same weeks:

July 3	117	47	6,088,210
July 4	Holiday
July 5	103	48	178,729
July 6	50	[illegible]	[illegible]
July 7	72	32	304,370
July 8	36	16	68,400
Total	384	166	$6,741,309

Among the sales reported to-day was the property at No. 31 Albany street, comprising a brick building and 1,340 feet of land, which has been conveyed by the Institution for Savings in Roxbury and Vicinity to Julia V. Sullivan. It is all assessed for $13,200, of which $11,200 is on the land.

In West Roxbury the frame dwelling and 20,400 square feet of land at No. 11 Ruskin street, corner of Weld avenue, all taxed for $9,760, have been sold by Richard P. Elliott to John H. Connor. The land is rated for $300.

The City of Boston has purchased from Martin M. Lomasney the frame house, stable and 2,218 square feet of land at Nos. 53-55 Harvard street, adjoining the Harvard primary school, Charlestown, for a price of $5,000. It is assessed on a total valuation of $4,000, of which $2,700 is on the land.

PEOPLE WIN "L" LEASE WAR

the holders of Elevated first and second preferred stock, the privilege of converting their shares at any time into equivalent common stock of the Elevated road.

Will Aid West End.

"It has often been claimed that the consolidation of the two systems will eventually enable the Elevated largely to increase its earnings, and that the Elevated common stockholders will reap all the benefit of this increased prosperity. This amendment, which I propose, will enable the West End stockholders to share in any such prosperity whenever they care to do so.

"The second new section will provide for the immediate sale of that valuable real estate of the West End which for some time has not been used for street railway purposes. The proceeds of this sale up to the amount of $1,500,000 will be held by the Elevated for a trust fund, invested and allowed to accumulate until consolidation takes place. After that time that income from the fund will be used each year for the retirement of Elevated second preferred stock.

"This will operate to increase the security of the second preferred stock as it decreases in amount and to enhance its value by creating a special market each year for a certain number of shares. It will also operate, in the long run, to the advantage of the Elevated by decreasing the annual dividend charges and the amount of capital stock outstanding which is preferred in position to its common stock. These amendments, I understand, meet with the approval of Governor Foss and the Public Franchise League, and they are based upon suggestions made by stockholders of the West End.

"The consilidation act of 1903 was, in the opinion of every disinterested tribunal which has considered the question 'amply liberal' to the West End stockholders. The Consolidation Bill which I have offered is, as it now stands, even more liberal. With the adition of these amendments the liberality is still further increased. It would seem as if every reasonable stockholder would assent to the provisions of such a bill as this. When these provisions are thoroughly understood, I have no doubt that they will be acceptable to a great majority of the stockholders.

"In any event it should be remembered that the subway and tunnel bill now offered by Senator Bennett is largely independent of the consolidation act. Upon this point there seems to have been considerable misapprehension. Whatever happens, the preliminary plans for these subways and tunnels will be made at once, which will occupy certainly all the time until the next Legislature convenes, and the bill can take full effect, if accepted by the City Council of Boston and the Elevated, even if consolidation does not take place.

"Summing it up, both substitute bills are sound and constructive legislation, fair and reasonable to all parties concerned. They offer an excellent remedy for present transportation bills. They should be enacted by the Legislature without delay, and I confidently expect that they will be."

Foss Praises Winsor.

Governor Foss said to-day that Robert Winsor, who represented the Elevated, had in the conferences on the lease and subway bills shown a commendable disposition to be fair with both the public and the West End stockholders.

"While I feel that we have the matter well in hand and that the final outcome will be settled fairly to all the interests concerned, we are still waiting for the consent of these West End stockholders who have been blocking the legislation by holding out for more than 7 per cent.," said Governor Foss.

"As Governor, I feel that I owe a duty to the public to see to it that its interests are protected. I have tried to do that, and I have talked with representatives of all the parties concerned, the West End stockholders, the Elevated and the Public Franchise League. Mr. Winsor of Kidder, Peabody & Co., represented the Elevated interests, and Louis D. Brandeis has handled the case for the league. Both of the latter have shown a disposition to treat the public fairly.

"I asked Mr. Winsor to be my guest over Friday night at my Summer home and he accepted my invitation. We talked the matter over carefully and Mr. Winsor agreed with me on twenty-five-year leases for the new subways to be built and on the 7 per cent. dividends for the West End stockholders.

Up to the West End.

"Saturday I talked with Mr. Brandeis. The Elevated and Public Franchise League are agreed on the legislation pending. I found Mr. Brandeis, Mr. Winsor and myself in entire accord. Of course, I hope to see the West End stockholders accept the proposed bills. They are fair to them, fair to the Elevated and the public, but up to the close of business Saturday evening we had had no assurances that the West End people would agree to accept the bill as drawn.

"There is nothing left but to pass the legislation and put it up squarely to the West End stockholders."

Louis D. Brandeis said that the plan is to push the legislation through the Senate to-day after two or three perfecting amendments are adopted. These amendments he said would make certain provisions of the bills a little clearer. On the fundamental questions, such as the extension of the leases and the rate of dividends to the West End stockholders he said all but the latter's representatives were agreed, and he does not look for any changes in that part of the legislation.

"Bills Fair," Says Brandeis.

"We have presented two bills," he said, "which we believe are absolutely fair to all parties. We have tried to be fair to all. I do not believe that any fair-minded man, whether he be a West End stockholder, an Elevated stockholder or a private citizen representing the public, can object to the legislation as drawn. We have agreed to allow the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth to appoint arbitrators at the end of 1922 to fix the rate of dividend for the West End stockholders. Nothing could be fairer than that.

"It seems to me that 7 per cent. is a handsome income on the West End stock. By the terms of the bill they are guaranteed that. It makes it a gilt-edge investment and the guarantee is almost as good as a government bond.

"The only hitch in the proceedings is the objection of some of the large West End stockholders. I sincerely hope that they will see that their attitude is hardly fair to the public. To ask the public to pay more than 7 per cent. on a public service corporation stock is going a little too far in my opinion.

"I am hopeful, however, that all interests concerned will be able to get together and that we shall pass the pending legislation and settle for some time to come the financial phase of the transportation problem in Boston."

BIG LABOR WAR IN SCANDINAVIA

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, July 10.—The entire Scandinavian peninsula is to-day in the throes of a great labor unrest, out of which political agitators are making much capital and calling upon the people of both Sweden and Norway to overthrow the monarchies and establish republics. Rioting broke out at several points in Norway today as a result of the lockout of 15,000 miners. The government dispatched troops to all affected points, and at the same time tried to mediate and prevent a colossal war of labor which might take 35,000 men from the mines and involve all other industrial organizations. Dispatches from Stockholm state that the building contractors throughout Sweden ordered a lockout of 41,000 workmen to-day. Unions allied with the building workers threaten to tie up the country's industry unless the order is revoked.

HEAT CAUSE OF FATAL RUNAWAY

Driven crazy by the heat, a team of horses drawing a heavy contractor's wagon, laden with bricks, became unmanageable while crossing the West Boston Bridge this forenoon, and, dashing madly towards Cambridge, threw their driver, Walter Frye, beneath the wheels. His chest and body were so badly crushed that he died in an ambulance on the awy to the Cambridge Relief Station.

The wagon belonged to William McLaughlin of Cambridge, and was bound from Boston to Cambridge. The sun beat down unusually strong on the bridge, and the horses were temporarily bereft of their senses.

SIX IN WORCESTER FELLED BY HEAT

WORCESTER, July 10.—The following persons were prostrated by heat here today:

E. M. McKnutt of Boston, assistant district manager of the Acme Self-Heating Iron Company. He was overcome in the Hotel Carlyle.

Joseph Codere, a carpenter, living at No. 388 Shrewsbury street.

Ida Goldberg of No. 114 Water street.

Mrs. Emma Bugbee of No. 115 Chandler street.

Fred Houle, a street department employe.

Policeman Pierce P. Tower of the motor cycle squad.

BURR WILL FIGHT ON ENROLLMENT

Ex-Representative Herbert W. Burr, Republican candidate for State Auditor, notified the Boston Board of Election Commissioners to-day that he would contest before the Supreme Court, Attorney General Swift's decision that no new enrollment of voters is necessary under the direct primary act. The election commissioners have ruled that a new enrollment of voters is necessary.

In reply to Burr's letter, the election commissioners state that their future ruling will depend upon a conference at the State House with Attorney General Swift.

ATWOOD FLIGHT ENDED BY HEAT

BALTIMORE, July 10.—Excessive heat to-day brought failure to Harry Atwood, the daring young Boston aviator, in his third attempt to finish his flight from Boston to Washington.

Leaving Atlantic City with Charles K. Hamilton as his passenger at 4:50 a. m., they flew as far as Stemmers Run, eight miles north of here, making one stop at Farnhurst, Del., to replenish their gasoline supply.

At Stemmers Run Atwood was forced to guide the machine to earth. Atwood and Hamilton left the aeroplane in a field just outside of Stemmer's Run and took a train there for this city. When they arrived here at 10:23 o'clock Atwood said: "The heat beat us. It was terrific. All the way from Wilmington we sailed through a temperature of about 90 degrees. This finally put the engine out of commission. We felt that it would be unsafe to continue. Also we were about all in ourselves from the heat."

TAFT DENIES ABBOTT CHARGE

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Absolute denial was made at the White House to-day by President Taft that he ever received any communication from Charles P. Taft, R. S. Ryan or anyone else regarding the Controller Bay-Guggenheim scandal, now centring around the letters of which Miss M. F. Abbott says she took copies from Interior Department files.

Secretary Fisher was a caller at the White House to-day, and announced that the alleged "Dick to Dick" letter from R. S. Ryan to Ballinger, telling how Charles P. Taft had told the President that Ryan represented the Guggenheims in the Controller Bay lands matter never existed. Miss Abbott declared she took a copy of this letter.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

ELKS CONTEST OVER OFFICE

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 10.—The Grand Lodge of Elks's convention opened here to-day. There is a warm contest for the office of Grand Exalted Ruler. The candidates are Charles P. Rasbury of Dallas, Texas; Arthur Moreland of New York, and Colonel John P. Sullivan of New Orleans.

The Elks, who are from every State and Territory, arrived mostly on special trains, and the Atlantic City Elks made superhuman efforts to overwhelm guests with hospitality. The atmosphere was superheated, but the ocean was cool and a mighty herd of Elks bathed in the surf in relays. The seashore resort made a hit with every Elk from afar. Grand Exalted Garry Herrmann of Cincinnati, the baseball magnate, declared for this shore emphatically.

"Atlantic City was made to order for the Elks," he said, "and here we have all the delights an Elk craves. It's a great town and it is going to be a hummer of a convention because Atlantic City understands us and we understand Atlantic City."

Boston Lodge of Elks is represented by a large delegation. The members were met by the local lodge members and escorted to the Islesworth Hotel. The Cambridge, Lowell, New Hampshire and other New England lodges are making their headquarters at the Ponce de Leon Hotel.

BLAZE AT HOTEL COMMONWEALTH

While the 150 guests were asleep, fire broke out in the storeroom on the second floor of the Hotel Commonwealth, corner of Allston and Bowdoin streets early today, and was extinguished by the porters and bellboys of the hotel with fire extinguishers.

Only the guests in the rooms near the blaze were aware of the fire. There was no panic. Some of the guests, aroused by the thin sheet of smoke which spread through the rooms adjoining the storeroom, were quieted by the attendants at the hotel.

BOTH PHYSICIANS MADE SAME MISTAKE

Place—Hospital in Pueblo, Colo.

Case—Chronic Bright's Disease of fifteen years' development.

Prognosis—Recovery impossible and patient (a Mr. Gaden) was so advised and that he could remain or go home.

On arrival at Center, Colo., could not sit up alone in bed. A local physician was called. He, too, said he could not recover and prescribed for his heart.

It did not look like the patient could live a week when a new agent was added to the treatment.

In ten days patient was sitting up, in twenty could walk outdoors. He made a slow but steady recovery. He now weighs 190 lbs.

These facts were given us by his wife, Mrs. Mary Gaden of Center, Colo., who will confirm them.

Both physicians were mistaken as to the possibilities and the same mistake is occurring everywhere—even in the hospitals of this city. And these mistakes are costing human lives.

The new agent employed as above was Fulton's Renal Compound. It does not conflict with the physicians' prescriptions. But it does change the prognosis from despair to hope.

Over nine out of ten of the dead from kidney trouble show Bright's Disease. This is a census fact that kidney-troubled people ought to know.

RUSTLER-CARDINAL GAME TO-DAY LAST OF ST. LOUIS SERIES

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

GRAND CIRCUIT RACE SEASON STARTS TO-DAY AT INDIANAPOLIS

RUSTLERS PLAY FINAL WITH REDS TO-DAY

By R. W. LARDNER.

After to-day's game on the South End grounds, Boston will see no more of the Reds until late in August. Roger Bresnahan's ferocious Cardinals from St. Louis will be here to-morrow for a set of four games. They are a hard bunch to beat this season, and will be particularly tough opponents this trip, for they are making a strenuous effort to earn for themselves a firm hold on a first division berth.

Incredible as it may sound, there is a chance for this St. Louis Club to climb to the top of the heap before this Eastern trip is over. It isn't among the probabilities, but it is possible. If such a thing happened, a special election of city officers would be held in the Missouri metropolis when the team returned home, and Mr. Bresnahan would be elected Mayor by acclamation. And perhaps money wouldn't pour into the cash register presided over by Mr. Seekamp.

The Rustlers don't like the idea of having the Cards so far up in the race and so horribly important. This St. Louis team was generally picked as a contender with Boston for last place before the season started. On paper it doesn't look like a better team than our own, but it is up among the real clubs and must be given due credit. The Rustlers will try their hardest to take some of the chestiness out of the Bresnahan aggregation, but it's going to be hard work.

Meanwhile, here's a suggestion (not original). Why not have an "amateur day" at all the big league ball parks, a day on which young pitchers and catchers would be tried out? Yes, it's a fine idea. Let's put it into effect at once. Every Friday, make each big league club use one or more young amateur batteries and let the public pay them as performers are paid on amateur nights at the vaudeville and burlesque houses—by showering pennies, nickles, dimes, quarters and dollars from the seats. Two or three real stars might be discovered in this way every year, and the attendance at such games would undoubtedly break Friday records. It would be a treat for Dorchester, and for all Boston, to see one of its young hopefuls on the mound against a team like the Chicago Cubs, while another kid from Englewood did the pitching for Chicago.

Sure, there are objections. For one thing, the game would have to be started about 8 o'clock in the morning, and even then, it might be impossible to get the side out before supper time. Then, too, some foxy manager might spring a ringer, trotting out Cy Young disguised as a high school boy, or otherwise crossing his opponents.

A Nifty Scheme.

Nevertheless, it's a nifty scheme and perhaps Messrs. Ebbets and Murphy, who are strong for novelties, will like it. They can have it, absolutely free.

The Reds will have to hustle some or Brooklyn will pass them before they start home once more. There's no telling what that Cincinnati crowd would do if its pride should return in seventh position. They go from here to Philadelphia, and after that to New York, so it is apparent that they have their work cut out for them.

BATTING ORDER.

Grant, 2b.	Ingerton, 3b.
Egan, 2b.	Rariden, c.
Severeid, c.	Flaherty, c.f.
Fromme, p.	Ferguson, p.

They can't possibly fall to the very bottom, however, and that helps some.

But if Cincinnati's outlook is gloomy, what about Boston's? When the Cardinals get through here, the Cubs will come along for five battles in four days. There may be a double header next Saturday. And when the Cubs have departed, another live gang, the Pittsburg Pirates, will visit us. No, it doesn't look as if the Tenney team had a holiday before it.

College Youth is Giant.

Hogg, the college youth who is a member of the Rustler pitching corps at present, has size enough to make him a winner. He is a six-footer and built like a marathon man. His lack of experience is against him, and Manager Tenney may not be able to afford to carry him along this season. But he doesn't want to relinquish all claim to so promising a youth and will welcome a chance to let him out under an optional agreement.

Harry Steinfeldt is one athlete who has a high opinion of Kaiser, the young Rustler outfielder landed in the Chicago trade. Steiny thinks this boy is going to be one of the best in the business when he learns more about the game. He is bound to hit, according to the veteran third sacker, and will develop into a real outfielder if he is given a chance.

BENNETS CHALLENGE BEST NINES IN STATE

With a record of fourteen victories and but one defeat, the Bennett A. A. team of Somerville is out with a challenge to meet the strongest semi-professional teams in the State. Its latest accomplishment was beating the strong Fitchburg team last Saturday. It also has victories over the Bay Views, Cambridge A. A., Acme A. A., West End A. A., Somerville A. A. and many other strong teams. It would like to meet the Marakins or Manets of Quincy, Plymouth Cordage, Winthrop B. C. of North Abington, North Reading, North Woburn, Winchester, Miah Murray's, Nonantums, Dorchester A. A., Winthrop K. of C., or other strong teams which desire games. The lineup consists of the following men: Buck Freeman, r.f.; T. Norton, l.f.; Mitchell, c.f.; Johnny Norton, 3b.; Haley, s.s.; Holland, 2b.; Christie Martes, 1b.; Knox or Bresnahan, c.; Danny Martes, p. TROLLEY BASEBALL LEAGUE CHANGES

BROCKTON, July 10.—At a meeting of the Trolley Baseball League to act upon the resignation of the Randolph team a considerable of a surprise was sprung. Rockland, Whitman, Stoughton and Holbrook withdrew, leaving only three clubs in the league.

Later, however, Manager Bernard Megley of the Holbrook team stated that his franchise would be taken over by other Holbrook people, and upon the strength of this statement Whitman team re-entered the league and the Randolph team was given permission to transfer its home games to Neponset. Stoughton and Rockland are out of the league, which will now finish the season with six clubs.

DIXIE KID AT HIS OLD TRICK IN PARIS

Dixie Kid, the New York welterweight, is evidently up to his old tricks. In a recent bout at Paris with Blink McClosky the Dixie Kid lost on a foul. It will be remembered that last Winter several New York clubs barred the self-styled welterweight champion, and it begins to appear that the Paris clubs will soon follow suit. For several years Dixie Kid has made it a practice to make fake matches, but somehow or other he always managed to get back into the good graces of the promoters long enough to be given another opportunity.

JONES TO RUN IN BIG MATCH RACE

John P. Jones, the wonderful Cornell distance runner, has decided to run one race this Summer after all. Several weeks ago it was reported that he had given up all idea of participating in open meets. Jones is slated to compete in a special mile race against Mel Sheppard and Abel Kiviat at Brooklyn, July 29. He will find both Shep and Kiviat in the best of form, while there is some doubt if Jones will be in anything like the shape which enabled him to run two such marvellous races in the Stadium last May.

FLYNN HAS TWO BOUTS ON FOR THIS WEEK

Danny Flynn, the West End heavyweight, has two engagements this week, one in which he may meet with some trouble, that with Tony Ross at Rochester to-night. Thursday night, at New York, Flynn meets Jewey Smith, the English heavyweight. Ross has improved greatly in his last few contests, and it may be that he will show Flynn a few things before ten rounds are over.

The Famous Knockout of Owen Moran by Ad Wolgast

BEST PITCHERS IN THE LEAGUES

Tyrus Cobb and Napoleon Lajoie, the greatest batsmen in the American League, if not in the country, were recently each given twenty-four hours to study the work of the American League pitchers and name the best ones as they appear to them.

Cobb named as the best twelve: Russel Ford, Joe Wood, Walter Johnson, Cy Young, Ed Walsh, Eddie Karger, Bob Groom, Dolly Gray, Vean Gregg, Harry Krause, Ray Fisher and Jimmy Scott.

Larry's selections were: Ed Walsh, Walter Johnson, Russell Ford, Jack Coombs, Chief Bender, Eddie Plank, Joe Wood, Barney Pelty, George Mullin, Bill Donovan, Ray Fisher and Frank Lange.

The pitchers were chosen as they look to Cobb and Larry. Neither presumed to say which pitchers are the leaders. There are no two critics better fitted by experience and judgment than the Georgia Peach and the Nap.

"Now, don't misunderstand me as to these pitchers," said Cobb. "I don't mean that I can't hit them. I can; but they have more natural ability or are better thinkers than the others."

Cobb did not include any Tiger pitchers in his selection because he does not bat against them, and for the same reason Larry named no Nap pitchers. Each club has two pitchers in the lists. Young and Gregg represent the Naps and Mullin and Donovan the Tigers.

Five pitchers are named by both—Ford, Johnson, Walsh, Wood and Fisher.

Veteran pitchers have the call with both Larry and Cobb. Larry names only two youngsters, Fisher and Lange, and Cobb names only Gregg and Fisher.

HARKNESS RELEASED.

CLEVELAND, July 10.—"Speck" Harkness, pitcher, was released to-day by the Cleveland American baseball club to the Portland, Ore., Club, from which team he was obtained by the Naps.

EASTERN YACHT CLUB CRUISE

CAMDEN, Me., July 10.—The Eastern Yacht Club fleet got away early to-day for a racing run down the Penobscot Bay, with a night anchorage to-night at Gilkey's Harbor. The big schooners Elena, Enchantress and Irolita were away with the gun for a good test of windward and leeward work. The wind was fresh southwest, and from the indications at the start, the day's race will be one of the best of the week.

A stiff southwest breeze was piping into Boothbay harbor when all hands came on deck yesterday morning, and as Tennant's harbor is shallow and the big boats would have to anchor at the mouth of the harbor, there was a protest against lying there all night with the wind in that quarter.

After a conference on the flagships, signals calling the captains to attend, it was decided to omit Tennant's Harbor this year.

There was no racing on the program for to-day, but as the run to Camden was 43 miles, the yachts lost no time in getting under way. They were also led to hasten by signs that the breeze was abating.

Boothbay Harbor was cleared of boats by 10 o'clock, all of the yachts swinging out into the broad Muscongus Bay from old Pemaquid Point. The Elena, Irolita and Seneca decided to have a look at rugged Monhegan, and stood well out to sea. The others, headed by the stately Enchantress, kept across Muscongus to Davis strait, where the narrow but deep passageway was threaded without accident.

So close did the yachts run to the ledges which line this watery that the masthead man on the Enchantress might easily have heaved the traditional biscuit upon Eastern Egg Rock or the Old Hump, while Roaring Bulls and Brown Cows fretted and fumed scarcely 100 yards on either side.

Once out into the gentle Penobscot, the gentle southwester that had wafted the fleet so carefully through the strait, took on more strength, and sent the yachts scudding up the Muscleridge Channel, around Owl's Head and up the bay to a late afternoon anchorage behind Negro Island, which nearly landlocks this harbor.

As most of the day was spent in making the run, the usual Sunday afternoon sporting pilgrimage was omitted, and instead a large reception was held to-night on one of the yachts to the captain and guests.

HUGHEY DUFFY DOESN'T SWEAR

Did you ever hear why Hughey Duffy, the White Sox manager, stopped swearing? You know it's no secret among players, and some fans, too, that Hughey never uses swearing as a scarecrow for players or anyone connected with the game. Duffy fights just as hard as the next man when it comes to winning, but no man has heard him use a cuss word in a long time.

He did once, and the great Mike Kelly cured him. The "Ten Thousand Dollar Beauty" was catching and Duffy was at bat for his team. He kicked on a strike called by the umpire and Kelly smiled through his mask and said:

"It was right over, Kid."

Duffy called Kelly a blankety-blankety-blank liar. Kelly didn't say a word back. Had he replied to Duff's remarks Hughey wouldn't have noticed it so much; but to have the great Kelly remain mute after such a storm of bad language worried Duffy. He kept thinking about it all during the rest of the game. When the last man was out and the boys were going to the clubhouse Duffy walked up to Kelly, reached out his hand and then said:

"Kelly, old man, I'm awfully sorry for the language I used. I've been thinking it over. You've made me know what bad language sounds like. I'm going to make you a promise, if it will interest you any. I'm never going to swear at a player on the ball field again."

BIG SIX LOSES TWO GAMES TO PHILLIES

In the recent New York-Philadelphia National League series, Christy Mathewson, the Giants' great asset, suffered a double defeat in the series. Big Six does not pitch this way very often, and the chances are that the great twirler is thinking up some way in which to make amends for the first double defeat scored on him in any series that he has pitched. It might have happened to anyone else and not been noticed, but Mathewson is expected to check the stride of all the good teams when he is in the points. The affair is the cause of much gossip in baseball circles.

LARNED TRAINS TO PLAY FOR CUP

In another week the annual tourney for the Longwood cup and the Eastern doubles tennis championship will be on at the Longwood Cricket Club, and as the time approaches there is considerable interest among tennis followers.

First among the players will be the national champion, William A. Larned, who will be called upon to defend the Longwood cup in the challenge round. While he has not done much in the tennis world thus far this season he has been undergoing a steady course of training that should bring his game to its top form by the time he reaches Longwood. On these courts and at Newport Larned always plays at his best and on these courts it would appear that he is unbeatable.

NEWS OF THE LINKS

That M. J. Brady, professional at the Wollaston Golf Club is capable of winning an open championship, is a surety. In tieing for the national open honors this year, and winning second money in the State open at the Country Club last week he showed exceptional form. It was not generally known that this home-bred "pro" played a 69 in practice for the State open event. No player in that classic field with the exception of Brady himself came within five strokes of that score in the tournament.

The new third hole at the Wollaston Golf Club attracted a good deal of attention from the visiting players, who took part in the open tournament there last Saturday. It will indeed be an improvement over the present No. 3. Professional comment has accredited the finest greens in this State to Wollaston and the course itself is one of the most delightful and golfy links near Boston.

In playing with the new golf balls, which have been spread broadcast this season, it has recently been noticed that a player topping a shot severely, will generally cut clean through the outside covering of rubber, thus spoiling the ball for future use. This is the disadvantage of a fast seller, for these smaller balls have been ordered in such quantities that the manufacturers have run completely out of stock and are becoming obliged to put balls on the market that are fresh from the mould. It can easily be seen that the rubber does not have sufficient time to harden in stock, hence the breaking of the cover.

Should players at large resist buying the new article and go back to the golf balls used last year they would be in an equally awkward predicament, for so much work has been put into the new product that the older makes are not being made in large enough quantities. There evidently remains but one alternative, but no, the game is at its height and must continue.

The Winchester Country Club is still in discussion as to whether the course shall stay at nine holes or be made into an eighteen-hole links. Although there are a number of nine-hole courses some distance out of Boston, it is only too apparent from the many golfers that play to-day that in order to have comfort in the game with a large field of players, it is necessary to have eighteen holes. Some of the crowd waiting at the first tee at Wollaston, Saturday, would have not been averse to a thirty-six-hole links, if it were possible.

There is some talk further south of arranging a match of professionals, J. J. McDermott, the present open champion of this country, and M. J. Brady, runner-up to him this year, being picked to play Alex Smith of Wykagyl and "Gil" Nichols of Wilmington, Delaware, formerly of Woodland. It is to be hoped that this match can be planned, as nothing is more conducive to the awakening of still further interest in a game that is coming before the footlights of American sporting blood more and more each year, and what is more, is gaining recognition.

THE MAN WHO KNOWS SAYS DONNYBROOK MUSTY FOR MINE AT GOOD TAPSTERS

ABOUT THE FIGHTERS

Kid Henry, the colored welterweight of Albany, touted by sports of that city as the coming champion, has backed out of his match with William Lewis which was booked to take place in Albany to-night. Joe Holly of Philadelphia has been substituted for Henry, who claims his hands were hurt in a recent bout in New York. The sports of Albany believe, however, that Henry does not like the gaff.

* * *

Sailor Burke and Harry English have been matched to box in New York on July 17.

* * *

K. O. Brown's challenge to Wolgast to box for $10,000 a side is looked on as a big joke by the sports, especially those in New York who know Brown and his manager. He is looking for a bout with a big loser's end attached to it. No one would put up the above amount for Brown, for no one outside of himself and his manager figure that he has a chance against Wolgast.

* * *

Joe Jeannette having hurt his finger, the bout with Jim Barry, which was billed to take place in New York to-morrow night, has been called off. Barry happened to meet Sandy Ferguson after getting word about Jeannette's injury and Barry asked Sandy to take Jeannette's place.

* * *

Matt Wells, the English lightweight champion, also talks about wanting to meet Wolgast for a side wager, and he has a forfeit up in England, his backer says. He will have to show the color of his money in this country, for forfeits in England do not count in matchmaking here. Wells expects to get a match with Wolgast in San Francisco on Labor Day. If they do meet Wells will be as easy for Wolgast as was Owen Moran.

* * *

After a disappearance covering several months, Rudy Unholtz, the rehabilitated Boer lightweight, has jumped into the pugilistic spotlight again. Unholtz whipped Peter Jensen, the battling Dane decisively in twenty rounds at Trinidad, Col., the other day. Jensen has a reputation of being a hard customer.

The Manville, R. I., boxing meeting that was scheduled to be held July 17 has been called off.

ST. LOUIS, July 10.—The Red Sox start the week to-day by playing the St. Louis Browns, from whom they have already won two out of three.

The Red Sox are on their way about the Western circuit for the second time this season, having made a good start in the land of heat, taking two out of three from the Browns, making it read five victories to three defeats for the week. The boys have certainly hit the ball hard and it looks like they would do much better on the road than at home, despite injuries which threaten to put a crimp in their playing strength.

During the past week the Red Sox have scored thirty-eight runs on seventy-five hits for 100 bases with fifteen errors, against thirty-three runs on forty-eight hits for sixty-eight bases and nine errors by their opponents.

Janvrin Plays First.

Yesterday's game with a score of 9 to 3 clearly indicates the difference in the game played by the Red Sox. They went with ease, Eddie "Knuckles" Cicotte pitching, and the team behind him fielded nicely. Another switch was made in the lineup. Manager Donovan came to the conclusion that "Hap" Myers wasn't a first baseman, and he put Harold Janvrin at the first sack, with the result that the former Boston schoolboy made the St. Louis fans talk about him. Not that "Child Hal" was such a wonder in this particular game, but because he handled himself like a first sacker, displaying knowledge of that corner, always being ready at the bag for the throw, setting a mark for the men to peg at. He also figured as a hitter, throwing his bat at the first one pitched to him in the second, beating it out for a single, and then in the fourth tearing off a clean as a whistle slam to left, scoring later. He pounded the ball each time up, the last times for long drives to the outfield.

Three Players Hurt.

While this is good news and adds comfort to a situation more or less deplorable, let me say that this village is evidently a "Jinx town." First Nunamaker's hand is torn to pieces, then to-day Wagner gets a finger busted on a slow throw to second on a force play and Tris Speaker was hit on the head by a pitched ball, sent up by Hamilton. Tris was not put out entirely, Wallace permitting Wilson to run for him; so Tris finished the game, getting two putout in the inning. Some gameness, believe me, upon the Texan's part. He will be all right for to-day's game.

Eddie Cicotte crept into the limelight along with Speaker and Doc Gessler by slamming the ball for two bases, hitting the bull, collecting $50 for the double. Duffy Lewis poled a homer with a man on and Harry Hooper made three hits in four times up with a total of six bases. The boys sacrificed to perfection, getting five for the day, making twelve hits for twenty bases against three of the Browns' twirlers.

Team Badly Crippled.

The injuries to Nunamaker and Wagner will be felt throughout this trip, for it will mean that Williams and Carrigan will do the catching, that is if Bill's finger is in such shape as to permit him to work. If not, Hugh Bradley will have to be used. When the team finishes up here to-day they move on to Chicago, where there is a tough series, embracing six games of ball in four days, due to the storms on the first trip. In the present condition of the Boston team this strain will be felt. The White Sox are going along nicely with a strong desire to hold on to their place in first division.

The Red Sox haven't much strength and yet they are likely to give Duffy's boys an awful battle.

AMERICAN ATHLETES READY FOR BRITONS

By RILEY.

To-morrow afternoon twenty-two stalwart American college athletes, ten from Yale and twelve from Harvard, will gather on the Queen's Club Field, London, where they will give battle to the pick of the knights of the cinder path and jumping boxes, representing Oxford and Cambridge.

The meet is the greatest international affair which has taken place since the 1908 Olympic games, when the American athletes, coached by the veteran Mike Murphy, swept all before them.

This meeting on the athletic field of the stars of these great universities of the Old and New World is attracting international importance. It is expected that 20,000 people will be gathered at the Queen's Club grounds to-morrow when the starter's gun sends the fliers from the mark in the first event on the program.

Among the spectators will be large numbers of the British nobility, who will be out in force to cheer the representatives of Johnny Bull on to greater efforts.

Nine Events on Program.

The Yankee athletes will not be without supporters, as the American business men and travelers in England have purchased large blocks of tickets.

The nine events on the program are the 100-yard dash, 120-yard hurdle, 440-yard run, 880-yard run, one-mile run, two-mile run, running high jump, running broad jump, hammer throw and the shotput.

From present indications it looks as though the American team would win at least five out of the nine events on the program unless some unforeseen accident occurs.

The Yankee fliers are almost certain to take first place in the 880-yard run, one-mile run, 120-yard hurdles, running broad jump and the shotput.

The American combine also has an even chance of capturing the premier honors in the 100-yard dash.

Over in London the sporting fraternity has an impression that the twenty-two athletes compose the pick of the American college world. Here's where the Britishers make one big mistake.

It is not going too far to say that if the champion American college athletes made the trip across the big pond that our English cousins wouldn't get a look in for a first place, and as first place is the only thing that counts they would be scoreless.

Not the Best Yankees.

If the American team had such college champions as John Paul Jones of Cornell, holder of the world's record for the mile, the great Ralph Craig of Michigan, the greatest college sprinter of the time, Joe Horner, the sturdy Michigan shotputter, Winton Paul, the Pennsylvania middle distance runner and other star performers in the recent intercollegiate games where would the British athletes fit?

There was a time when the Englishmen were able to give the American champions an even tussle. But those days have long since passed. No more striking example of this can be found than in a comparison of the records made at the recent English track and field championships and those made at the A. A. U. national championships. In hardly a single event does an English record compare favorably with those made at Forbes Field.

Tex Ramsdall won both the 100 and 220-yard dashes at the English championships. Yet it is not rash to say that Ramsdall would not finish better than third in either the 100 or 220-yard dashes if he had been pitted against the classy field which faced the starter's gun in the Smoky City.

How Athletes Stand.

In the 100-yard dash Reilly and Thatcher of Yale should have a merry tussel for first place with McMillan and Lange of Oxford. Every member of this quartet is capable of doing the century dash in ten seconds flat.

In the 440-yard run the American supporters will bank their hopes on Kelley of Harvard. On last Thursday Kelley turned an ankle but Coaches Donovan and Mack now say that he has recovered and will start in his event.

Pitted against the Crimson favorite will be McMillan of Oxford, a 50 2-5s man, or Taylor of Cambridge, who is good for 51 4-5s. Kelley is rated as a 50 seconds man. This year, however, Kelley has not been running up to form, and with a bad ankle he is not expected to win.

Herbert Jaques, Jr., of Harvard, should have matters pretty near his own way in the 880-yard run. Jaques has been going some fine running on the cinder path this year, having covered the half mile in 1m. 56s. For his running mate Jaques will have Preble of Harvard. The latter is capable of covering the distance in 1m. 58 3-5s.

Opposed to these two brilliant runners will be Baker and Taylor of Cambridge. Neither of these men is anywheres near as good a runner as Jaques. In this event Preble will be used chiefly to corner the Britishers while Jaques goes out for a big lead in the first part of the race.

Records in Danger.

The mile run is conceded to either Jaques or Lawless of Harvard. This year Jaques has covered the mile in 4m. 23 3-5s. Lawless has turned the trick in 4m. 25s., and also has the honor of finishing fourth in the mile run in the intercollegiate games.

Opposed to Jaques and Lawless will be Baker and Moore of Cambridge, neither of whom has yet run a mile in 4m. 29s.

In the two-mile race Withington of Harvard, with a record of 9 minutes 38 3-5 seconds, should stand a good chance of winning over Porter of Oxford and Taylor of Cambridge.

The three-mile run is expected to be won by an Englishman as Withington has not had a great deal of experience at running this distance. The event will probably be taken by Taylor of Cambridge or Porter of Oxford.

The 120-yard high hurdles will be a cinch for Chisholm or Cummings of Yale. Chisholm is a wonder at toppling the high timbers, he being able to do 15 2-5 seconds when hard pressed. Cummings is also a hurdler of no mean ability and is capable of 16 seconds. Philips of Cambridge is completely outclassed by this year, his best time being 16 1-5 seconds.

Looks Like Yankee Victory.

If he is in shape Canfield of Yale should win the high jump in a walk. He has cleared the bar at 5 feet 9 inches, while the best that the Englishmen have done is 5 feet 8¾ inches. Dennis of Harvard, another good jumper, will team up with Dennis in this event against Dubois and Bellorby of Cambridge.

In the broad jump Holden of Yale should win if records count for anything. This son of Old Eli has jumped 22 feet, 7 inches, which is almost a foot better than that of Susskind of Cambridge, whose best jump is 21 feet, 10 inches. Johnny Kilpatrick of Yale is also entered in this event and is good for 21 foot, 11½ inches.

Putnam of Oxford should have an easy time in winning the hammer throw. With a record of 153 feet, 3 inches, he should win by a comfortable margin over Childs of Yale and Cable of Harvard. In practice Cable has beaten Putnam's mark but when it comes to real competition he usually falls down flat.

Kilpatrick should win the shot put without effort. He has thrown the 16-pound missile 45 feet, 2¾ inches, which is almost six feet further than any Englishman has yet thrown it.

From whatever angle you view the situation there is sure to be some keen competition to-morrow with the chances very strong for Old Glory.

BOSTON OARSMEN GOING TO SARATOGA

Attention of followers of rowing is directed to the thirty-ninth annual regatta and championships of the N. A. A. O. to be held at Saratoga Lake Friday and Saturday, July 28 and 29. This is two weeks earlier than this fixture has been rowed for several years. Crews from all over the country as well as Canada are shipping for this fixture and there will be no end of fast scullers ready to attack the records for dead water. Boston will be represented by the Union Boat Club crew in the race for eight-oared shells, according to the statement of William Haines, and the club will see to it that the fastest combination available will be groomed to meet the Minnesota, Argonauts, Vespers, New York A. C. and other fast crews now in training. The Riversides, although homeless, are already discussing their chances and may be found on the line fighting it out with the Unions, by which crew they were defeated by a small margin July 4.

NOTES FROM THE STABLES

The trotting gelding, Stanford, was the surprise of the Hills Grove meeting and had there been poolselling at the meet his followers could have won him outright there and then. The gelding, like all the get of Autograph, has always raced game, but Fred Hyde appears to have him better than ever this season.

* * *

Starter Biggs, from Baltimore, who officiated at the Hills Grove meeting, pleased both the spectators and the horsemen. Henry W. Burress, the veteran starter, acted as presiding judge and will also fill that position at the Woonsocket and Dover meetings.

* * *

A well-known Grand Circuit follower, who saw the much-touted Chamber of Commerce candidate, Joe Patchen II., when he paced his trial mile in 2:03¾, at Indianapolis, makes the prediction that the big son of "Old Joe" will not be top-heavy favorite that many think. However, the followers of the Geers and Cox stable will be pleased if he is.

* * *

Fred Clark says that he has in his stable at Narragansett Park the most promising youngster that he has ever had anything to do with, and Fred has had some pretty good ones, including High Private, one of the trotters that Bob Proctor will race through the Grand Circuit this season. The youngster that pleases Fred so much is a two-year-old colt by Peter the Great, out of Jenny Scott, 2:14¼, and was bred by Jack Crabtree of this city.

* * *

Those who should be in a position to know, say that the falling out among pool room syndicates, to which the stopping of speculation at Hills Grove is attributed, has been fixed and that everything will be all right in Rhode Island from this on.

* * *

The Canadian pacing mare, Fern Hal, 2:17¼, that cleaned up two races at Hills Grove, looks exceedingly high class. It appears that she could pace in 2:20 on the ice last Winter, and it takes some pacer to do that.

* * *

While he has not yet been a mile faster than 2:35, Ed Gillis says that the four-year-old colt, Director Todd, 2:20¼, pleases him very much. He is just out of the stud and will not be started till later on.

* * *

Trainer Bob Lundy will soon move to Readville with several of the Hall matinee horses, and a couple of promising youngsters belongeng to Frank Hall. By the way, the Gentlemen's Driving Club has opened the club house at the track for the season.

* * *

The get of the Allen Frain stallion, Bingara, are showing up well at the races this season. The son of Bingara, 2:06¼, furnished a winner at both the Hills Grove and Hohokros meetings last week.

MOHA-GARDNER BOUT TO BE FAST

The real calibre of Bob Moha, the Milwaukee boxer who is touted as a coming champion by Western sports, will be determined to-morrow night, when he clashes with Jimmy Gardner at the Armory A. A. This is the best bout of the week, and the local fans are much interested in it.

Moha has been training here for nearly a week, and the manner in which he has boxed with Jim Barry has made some of the followers of the game figure that Gardner is going against a hard customer. If Gardner is not in as good shape as when he met Frank Klaus the second time here, those who have made the former the favorite are likely to get a bad bump. While not as tall as Gardner, the Milwaukean is a stronger built fellow, and is a far better hitter. He is also fast on his feet and pretty clever, besides being aggressive. He uses both hands well, and there is a good kick in each.

From the Gardner quarters come the report that Jimmy will be in good condition and that the postponement from last Thursday on account of the excessive heat helped him greatly. This is Moha's first appearance in the East, and the record he has made in the West in defeating such men as Clabby, Jack Dillon and Mike (Twin) Sullivan, makes him look good to the local fans.

In the semi-final George Robinson of Cambridge, the former amateur star, will take on Jack Cottman of Philadelphia. Ted Thompson of Chicago may find Dave Powers of Malden a hard man to trim, while the opener between Billy Yerkes of Hot Springs and Joe Brown of Cambridge street promises real action.

LAND QUITS NAPS.

CLEVELAND, O., July 10.—Grover Land, catcher for the Cleveland Naps, has jumped the team. Land had a fight with Clay Folger, who guards the pass gate at League Park here. He whipped Folger. He was fined by the club for ungentlemanly conduct, and left in a huff.

Bouts Scheduled For This Week

MONDAY—Ray Bronson vs. Young Erne at Memphis; Dick Hyland vs. Willie Beecher at New York; Joe Rivers vs. Tommy Dixon at Los Angeles; Willie Lewis vs. Kid Henry at Albany, N. Y.; Porkey Flynn vs. Tony Ross at Rochester, N. Y.; Joe Mandot vs. Boyo Driscoll at New Orleans.
TUESDAY—Jimmy Gardner vs. Bob Moha, George Robinson vs. Jack Cottman, Ted Thompson vs. Dave Powers, Joe Brown vs. Billy Yerkes at Armory A. A.; Ted Nelson vs. Frank Mantell at New York.
THURSDAY—Porkey Flynn vs. Jewey Smith at New York; Jim Kendrick vs. Packey Hominey at New York.
SATURDAY—Johnny Kilbane vs. Patsey Kline, Paul Kohler vs. Kid Dalton, at Vernon, Cal.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Joe Wood came within one of tying the big league strikeout mark in Friday's game at St. Louis. The record is sixteen, held jointly by Ed Walsh and Rube Waddell. Joe cut down fifteen of Browns and probably would have done better but for the intense heat. It's too bad the Red Sox star didn't fan Shotten in the ninth, for that would have given him a total as big as the best and also would have made a no-hit game for him, for Shotten was the lad who got the Browns' lone single. He probably won't hit Wood safely again this season.

* * *

Cy Rigler has too much sympathy for the ball players to try to make them hurry in weather such as has been inflicted on Boston recently. Cy keeps saying "hurry up," but he says it half-heartedly and hardly expects to be obeyed. The athletes have begged him piteously to let them alone, arguing that they were doing all that could be expected of them when they got to their positions at all. Larry McLean takes up a lot of time, puting on and removing his shin-guards, strolling after foul balls and wandering up to take his turn at bat, but you can't get mad at Larry. He incites sympathy with his pathetic smile and bored look.

* * *

Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford had another spat the other day at Detroit. Rollie Zeider of the Sox hit a home run to right centre. The ball seemed closer to Cobb, but Ty stood still and allowed Sam to chase it. The crowd jeered Cobb and he retired from the game without consulting anybody. The next day he got two triples and a single and drove in enough runs to beat Chicago and put the Tigers back in first place. Ty would hit .900 if he quarreled with Sam every day.

* * *

Mrs. Frank Shulte is making the Eastern trip with her husband. It's a sort of honeymoon, for they were married on June 20. She will now be able to see Frank at his best, for he accomplishes more on the road than at home. His best hitting is done in the Eastern cities, particularly in New York and Brooklyn. Mrs. Chance and Mrs. Cole are also on the jaunt with the Cubs. The former is worried over her husband's condition and is braving the horrors of midsummer traveling to be with the peerless leader.

GRAND CIRCUIT BEGINS TUESDAY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 10.—With many of the fastest harness horses in America at the State Fair Grounds track, a clear sky and a fast track are all that remain to make the opening of the Grand Circuit racing season, Tuesday, auspicious. This will be Indianapolis's first year in the Grand Circuit. The field is large and the average entry for the sixteen races is eight horses. Three small fields bring the average down. In the 2:04 pace only four horses will start, and in the 2:15 stake pace only five will go to the wire. Six trotters will receive the word in the free-for-all trotting sweepstakes.

The biggest field of the week will be seen on Wednesday in the 2:14 pace, when thirteen pacers will start. There will be four fields of nine, three of eight and two of seven. A total of 128 horses was named in the week's program.

E. F. ("Pop") Geers, the veteran driver of the Circuit, has been at the track for some time. He has horses entered in half the races.

BORCHERS KNEW BASEBALL CROWD

"Ping" Bodie, the sensational newcomer on the Chicago White Sox, who has branched out from the Pacific Coast League is a good story teller, and delivered himself of these while waiting his turn to bat.

"The funniest man who ever played ball in California is Big Chief Borchers, pitcher. When the Chief's arm went back on him he took to umpiring. He also runs a milk ranch, now that he has pried off his spikes and brass toe for all time. I rode around on his wagon one morning just for a lark. It certainly was a picnic. We came to one house in particular. Borchers hopped up the stairs to deliver a quart of milk. He rang the bell and presently the lady of the house appeared.

"'I beg your pardon, but aren't you Mr. Borchers, the famous baseball pitcher?'

"'My name is Borchers, and I was a baseball pitcher,' snapped the Chief. 'What of it?'

"'Oh—er—why — nothing, Mr. Borchers, only I wanted to tell you that my husband is a baseball player, too.'

"'Give me back that milk,' yelled the Chief, and grabbing it he went down the stairs two at a time.

"'Can't trust that baseball crowd,' he muttered as he drove off."

Mike Donlin His Hero.

"When I was a little more of a kid than I am now," said Bodie, "I used to have pictures of Mike Donlin pasted on the head of my bed. Mike was just as good a slugger in those days as he was when he quit to be an actor. He was my little god. I used to practice standing at the plate in the sand lots like I'd seen Mike stand in the ball parks out home. Mike played with the 'Sand Crabs,' the Santa Cruz Coast League team.

"In the year I have in mind the 'Sand Crabs' were in the lead for the blue ribbon, but not by much of a margin. They needed a game the worst way to make things seem more comfortable, and Mike and his big ash beam constituted about 90 per cent. of Santa Cruz' hope. They went up into the enemy's camp and played the final. Nip and tuck for ten innings and no runs.

Knocked Ball Out of County.

"Great Mike at bat, the crowd on tip toe with expectation. I never saw a man swing harder than Mike did at the first two. He missed them a mile. But not the third one. Oh, what a blow he hit it! Out—out—out it sailed, while three fielders took one peek and then raced like a team for the centre field fence. But not to get the ball! No siree. With the aid of a generous wind it cleared the fence and was lost to view.

"And that isn't all.

"That ball went into the next county! It need to take but two or three healthy bounds to get there at that, for this ball ground was just inside the county line. I guess that was the greatest drive of his whole career. I know it stirred up in me again the hope to be a slab artist like Mike Donlin."

PHILLIES TRADE OFF TWO FOR ONE

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—Garry Herrmann, grand exalted ruler of the Elks, who is in Atlantic City, has closed a deal with the Phillies. President Fogel took the Phillies to Atlantic City last night to entertain them over Sunday. The boss of the Elks and Fogel met on the board walk and they quickly closed a deal that has been hanging fire for several weeks. The Phillies get Beck, the stalwart rightfielder, in exchange for Pitcher Bert Humphries and Outfielder Wilson of the Calgary Club.

The Phillies need Beck to brace their outfield during the absence of Titus and Walsh. Beck will come here Tuesday with the Cincinnati team, and he will be immediately placed in right field. Humphries joined the Phillies in 1910, but was sent to Scranton for development. He came back last Spring, but has had little chance to show his ability because of the Phillies large staff. He pitched the ninth inning Saturday against St. Louis and was batted for four hits and three runs.

Why I Believe in Woman Suffrage

By DOROTHY DIX

A CORRESPONDENT asks me why I believe in giving women the ballot, and what good it will accomplish to grant women the right to vote.

I believe that women should be given the right of suffrage:

Because taxation without representation is tyranny.

Because all just government must rest upon the consent of the governed.

Because America can never be a real democracy until all of its people, whether male or female, participate equally in the government.

Because it is eminently unjust that one half of the people should be ruled by the other half, simply because one-half is male and the other is female.

Because the accident of sex should not be made a woman's shame, and place the noblest and most intelligent woman in the same class as the most degraded man.

Because no man can any more represent a woman at the polls than he can in a millinery shop.

Because men and women are not alike in strength or mentality. They have different needs and need different representation in the government.

Because there are six million wage-earning women in the United States, and these women have a vital need for a voice in determining the conditions under which they work and for their own protection.

Because the class that furnishes three-fourths of the high school graduates, and only 8 per cent. of the criminals will make desirable citizens.

Present Government Unjust

Because just as it takes a man and a woman working shoulder to shoulder, with every faculty of heart and head brought into play, to make the ideal home, so it will take men and women working together, side by side, giving the best of both masculine and feminine qualities, to make the ideal country. A solely masculine, or feminine world is unthinkable. A solely masculine government is iniquitously unjust.

I believe:

That women will have the same effect upon politics that she has upon society, that she will elevate it, purify it, humanise it. The very first result of woman's suffrage in Colorado was to take the primaries and the voting places out of the back rooms of saloons into the school houses and churches, and to remove the polling booths from bootblacking establishments and such places to respectable quarters.

I believe that the very fact that woman's range of vision is largely personal, and that she will probably look at the man more intently than she does at the issue, will make for the putting up of clean candidates for office, and make the election of notoriously corrupt men an impossibility when women are given the right to vote.

I believe that one of the most beneficial effects of giving women the franchise will be that they will quicken the civic conscience of men, and that just as a devout woman now takes her good but indifferent husband to church with her, the woman with the responsibilities of citizenship heavy on her shoulders, will take her husband with her to the polling booth and thus two votes will be cast for good government where only too frequently none at all is cast now.

I believe that the minute women get the right to vote we will be done with child labor, and that far better laws will be passed for the protection of the working women, and to safeguard young girls. In every case where a law has been passed raising the age of consent for young girls, there has been the united womanhood of the State behind it.

Increase Intelligence

I believe that the moral effect of having them will give an enormous impetus to developing the character of the women themselves; that it will make them bigger, broader, more intelligent, and that it cannot but be beneficial for the mothers of the race to spend more time in studying the science of government, and less on the science of bridge whist.

I believe that the best and only effective "trust busters" will be the woman voter. Put the ballot in the hand of the woman who daily finds that her dollar or two of market money buys less and less milk and meat, and bread for the hungry brood, and she will find some way to curb the rapacity of the great corporations that make millionaires of the few and paupers of the many.

The trusts and the machine politicians do well to oppose woman suffrage, for their day will be ended when woman is given the ballot.

Freckles

"Once Freckled - Always Freckled" No Longer True—How to Remove Quickly.

People used to take their freckles to the grave. That was before they knew about Kintho, the simple remedy that is sold under a guarantee to remove freckles, or money back. Look in the glass, and at the first sign of a freckle get a two-ounce package of Kintho at Houghton & Dutton and Riker Jaynes, or wherever toilet goods are sold and see if it doesn't remove your freckles as if by magic.

"Use Kintho Soap too. It will not only help give the freckles a push, but it is delightful for toilet use."

Ballet of Real American Girls for Grand Opera

Illustrations by Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

THE European chefs de ballet were all wrong, after all.

The American-made ballet girl is a pronounced success. Witness in proof of this, the preparations for the second season of the ballet school at the Boston Opera House.

In a few weeks thirty-five American girls, practically all from Greater Boston, will begin to receive instruction in the art de ballet at the Opera House.

Under the supervision of Giuseppe Bonfiglio, chef de ballet, and under the direct tutelage of Mme. Daubl Muschietto and Miss Maria Paporello, these girls will be initiated into the mysteries and graces of ballet dancing.

'Tis a difficult art, this one of tossing one's self in the air and alighting on the big toe of the right foot as easily as a feather. When the Boston Opera school for ballet girls was started here last season, European ballet masters said: "Pooh! It can't be done in America. We have taught the ballet since grand opera was first known. We have all the art and tricks and reputation. America always had to come to us for ballet girls and always will."

The foreign masters said American girls could not endure the strain of ballet lessons. It is well known that the instruction is difficult, especially in Europe, where the maestros are often harsh and unfeeling.

But in Boston, under the kindly teaching of Mr. Bonfiglio, Mme. Muschietto and Miss Paporello, American girls learned last season to dance the ballet so gracefully that their efforts were applauded loudly when the girls were seen on the opera stage later in the season. Nor were the girls overworked in their lessons.

"I watch them lest they strain themselves," said Mme. Muschietto to a group of spectators, "they have so much enthusiasm. They dance and dance. They would dance till they drop if I did not prevent."

When the Boston ballet school resumes sessions for the season of 1911-12 there will be some of the girls from last year in the new class both for practice and for example to the others. About thirty-five beginners can be accommodated at first.

True, there are scores of European ballerinas in the opera company here, imported when the enterprise first started. It was impossible to start opera here without a practiced body of ballet girls. But the Boston Opera ballet school will turn out more and more American-taught pupils as the seasons proceed.

Enough has been done now to show the European schools that they have no monopoly of the ballet.

Synopsis of First Instalment

SIR IAN and Lady Hereward have walked two miles through the woods from the house, Friar's Moat, the ancestral home of the Herewards, to Riding Wood House, to pay a visit to Mrs. Forestier, their neighbor, whose late husband had been a dear friend of the Hereward family.

It is a warm June day, and the couple choose to wait in the cool hall until their host shall appear. Lady Hereward drops the little gold case which she always carries on her arm, and seems grateful when Sir Ian recovers it and returns it without prying beneath the dainty jeweled lid. He recalls that he has never seen the inside of it.

The "vanity box," as it was called, was Lady Hereward's constant companion. Those who presumed to know said it contained a secret of which Lady Hereward was jealous.

Sir Ian has just returned with Lady Hereward from a trip to Paris and the Continent, and Riding Wood is the first place they visit.

Sir Ian is a handsome, well-set-up man of forty-one, bronzed with the hot sun of African campaigns. He resigned his colonelcy after falling heir to the Hereward estates, and is leading the life of a retired country gentleman. His beautiful wife is said to be some months older. Despite this fact, and that he is said to have experienced a romance with a woman much younger before his marriage, he is all devotion to his handsome and remarkably preserved wife.

Lady Hereward notices, secretly, however, that every time he comes to Riding Wood Hall he seeks out a certain portrait, painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and stands rapt in admiration before it. He never suspects that she guesses the secret that draws him toward it. Lady Hereward does guess, and the thought stuns her. She pulls out her "vanity," and although she is still remarkably beautiful she notices the first faint tracings of lines that are not in the fair young face in the portrait.

It is Mrs. Forestier, appearing at that moment from her rose garden, all smiles, who precipitates the storm that has been gathering in the breast of Lady Hereward.

She notices her guests before the portrait and calls attention to the fact it greatly resembles Teresina Ricardo, once the close friend of Millicent Hereward, and to whom Sir Ian was said to have been very attentive when he was in India, prior to his marriage.

Then the latter tells her guests that "Terry" Ricardo has just arrived in England and had planned to surprise the Herewards that very day by a visit, with her cousin Maud.

Mrs. Forestier proposes that they stay and ride back to the Friar's Moat in her auto, but Lady Hereward, strongly agitated, insists that she and her husband walk back through the woods, as they came.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

PART ONE—(Continued)

"BY the way, Miss Verney didn't once come over here while you were gone," said Mrs. Forestier, "though I begged her to drop in any day, or every day, to tea, thinking she might be lonely."

"Nora isn't the sort of girl to be lonely, while she has the run of the library," remarked Sir Ian. "Still, I wonder she didn't come over."

"She is sulking," said Lady Hereward.

"Isn't that rather an unkind thing to say?" asked Sir Ian.

"Not at all," Millicent answered somewhat sharply. "Nora doesn't care who knows. Indeed, I think she likes people to know that she's furious with me."

"Why, I thought she adored you—as everybody does—and even a little more," exclaimed Mrs. Forestier. "I'm sure she ought to. You've been an angel to her—and so has Sir Ian."

Sir Ian smiled at the suggestion, as concerned himself: "One would have to be decidedly fiendish not to be good to Nora."

"Oh, of course she's clever and pretty, and all that," admitted Mrs. Forestier, "but the fact remains that you and Milly came forward when she was left without a penny in the world, and nobody else was inclined to bother much about her, though she had crowds of relatives."

"Her relatives are all poor," said Lady Hereward. "We were glad to do what we could for her."

"And we've been well paid for what we have done," said Sir Ian. "Milly took her, it's true, not because she particularly felt the need of having a companion, but because she was heartily sorry for the poor child when the vicar died, leaving nothing.

"However, now that Nora has been nearly six months in the house, I'm sure Milly would hardly know what to do without her. She's made herself useful—almost indispensable in a thousand ways, little and big, and not only is she pretty and clever, as you say, but she is good. A most unusual girl."

"I should like to have you as my champion, if I needed one," laughed Nina Forestier.

Doesn't Need Champion

"Nora doesn't need a champion, though," protested Lady Hereward. "Nobody is oppressing her. Nobody is unjust to her. On the contrary, everybody is very good and considerate. I am just as fond of her as ever, though I am hurt, and think I have a right to be hurt, because she has entirely changed to me in the last two months.

"It isn't my fault that she fell in love with the one most undesirable man in the world—her world, anyhow; and he being what he is, it isn't my fault that my very love for the girl prevented me from handing her over to him with my blessing."

"Milly is quite right, isn't she, Sir Ian?" said Mrs. Forestier, soothingly, seeing, or fancying she saw, that tears were not far from her friend's eyes.

"Quite right," responded Sir Ian, smiling at his wife. "She usually is right. By the way, she has brought back a present for all her pets in the village, from old bodies in their second childhood to young bodies just beginning their first."

"She would!" exclaimed Nina Forestier, aware that the subject was changed. "How they all worship her! But then, as I said, everybody does."

"Not everybody," answered Lady Hereward, looking out of the window with a far-away look, which went past the green lawn and the flower border blazing in the sun.

"She has brought a present for you, too," Sir Ian went on.

"Only a quaint old seal I picked up at an antique shop," said his wife. "It's nothing."

Mrs. Forestier protested that it was sure to be lovely, and even if it weren't, in itself, it would be lovely to her as a proof—unneeded, really—that Millicent never forgot her friends.

After that, they talked about some of those friends, great and humble; Mrs. Forestier told of the small happenings of county and village, while the Herewards had been away; and altogether it was a very pleasant luncheon.

When it was over Sir Ian left the table with the ladies; they had coffee on the loggia which opened out from Mrs. Forestier's boudoir, and later, gave a few moments to the rose-garden, but only a few, for Lady Hereward insisted that they must not miss the Ricardos.

Conscientious

As she and Sir Ian walked away together, with their air of good comradeship, Nina Forestier, looking after them from the loggia, thought how punctiliously conscientious her friend was.

It was not probable that Milly could really be pleased at the idea of seeing Teresina Ricardo, and it would have been easy enough to have missed the intended "surprise visit" without appearing to have avoided it intentionally. Yet, rather than run the risk of seeming inhospitable to a woman who had not the slightest claim upon her, Milly would cut short her visit to Riding Wood.

To be sure, she might have stayed a little longer, and still have reached home in time, if she had accepted the offer of Mrs. Forestier's motor. But, if one could get at her real reason for refusing it, very likely it would turn out to be consideration for the chauffeur, or something else absurdly unselfish, rather than her own desire for a second walk through the woods.

"However," thought Mrs. Forestier, as she saw the two tall, erect figures disappear over the brow of the slight hill which separated them from the long stretch of wood, "however, Milly is so desperately in love with Sir Ian after all these thirteen years of being his wife, that I believe she actually enjoys a tete-a-tete with him better than anything else.

"He's perfectly delightful to her, too, and they're the greatest friends. Yet I wonder if he's as much in love with her as she is with him, or——"

She did not finish the sentence in her mind, but let it break vaguely as she lost sight of Sir Ian and Lady Hereward, walking companionably together, shoulder to shoulder.

The Visitor.

The stable clock at Friars' Moat had just struck the quarter after four, as a slender woman, dressed in white, walked up the avenue toward the house. She was alone, and walked slowly, glancing about her with interest, as if she wanted to impress every feature of the place upon her mind.

Five minutes after the striking of the clock, she arrived at the door, but even then she did not ring at once. She looked at the old, old stone house, and down at the water-lily leaves, in the moat which still ran along one side, though elsewhere it had been filled up generations ago.

An electric bell seemed singularly unsuited to the heavy oak door, hinged and studded with iron, but it was there, though a mere inconspicuous button, and the visitor touched it after a moment's hesitation.

A young footman in a quiet livery answered her ring, and she asked for Lady Hereward.

"Her ladyship went out to lunch, with Sir Ian, and has not come back yet," said the servant. He had never seen the face of the caller before, but it was interesting and striking.

It was the face of a woman whom most people would like to know, and the footman thought her a personage, though she had come on foot and was simply dressed in a short white cotton frock, with a garden hat trimmed only with a drooping wreath of ivy leaves.

He had a dim idea that it might be a grievous offence in the eyes of his mistress if he let this stranger go without making an effort to detain her; yet, on the other hand, Lady Hereward had given no instructions concerning expected visitors.

Usually, when she went out, if she wished to see any one who might arrive before she came back, she mentioned the hour of her return, and directed the servants to ask possible callers to wait.

Wisdom of the Manicure Lady

She Sighs Because She's Too Lucky to Find an Easy Mark

"SOME girls gets by pretty easy," said the Manicure Lady, fanning herself wearily after her hot ride in the subway. "My goodness, George, did you see that stuff in the papers—that stuff about the young woman who was married when she was fourteen and never had no girlhood? Did you read the part about the old gent that asked her out to dinner and then handed her a three-hundred-dollar bank roll to put into her pocket book? The gent didn't even hint at any hopes for a future engagement—he didn't even ask to hold her hand. That's what I can't get at—why none of them really soft things ever comes this way. I seen this girl's picture in the paper, and I can't say that she is any world beater for the looks. She don't walk in beauty like the night, as Lord Burns once said."

"Lord Who?" asked the Head Barber.

"Lord Burns," replied the Manicure Lady, "or maybe it was Lord Shakespeare. I have forgot. Anyhow, she didn't look no prettier than I look this blessed minute."

She Looked Pretty

"I guess you're right, no matter how pretty she looked," said the Head Barber, looking at his little friend with the approving look of an elder brother. The Manicure Lady was fanning herself, and the stuffy air of the tunnel had colored her cheeks a little, but she was undeniably sweet and wholesome to gaze upon. "I guess you're right," the Head Barber concluded.

"I wasn't fishing for no compliments, George," she went on. "You know just as well as I do that I ain't that kind of a sport. I just wonder, sometimes, why nobody ever gets acquainted with me and proposes marriage to me. You know, George, that it wouldn't take three hundred dollars or three hundred cents, or three hundred million dollars until we did that world-old lockstep up the aisle, but whether I'd take it or not, the fact remains that nobody has put the proposition up to me.

"The old gent was reading about the case up to the house last night, and he and mother almost got into a Marquis of Greenberry dispute. Ma said that she thought the girl done perfectly right to take the three century notes as long as she was likely to marry him, which would save her from the embarrassing job of lifting a like amount later on. Pa said that the girl had no right in the world to take the money. I think he was right.

Nothing But Money

"The girl said in a statement that she gave out to one of the papers that he took her to dinner three or four times and then asked her if he might see her pocketbook. She hesitated a minute, thinking that he might be a leading man or something, and then, looking into his honest old eyes, she gave him the pocketbook, and when she got it back there was three hundred in regular kale inside. She said in the statement that her cheeks flushed crimson, but she didn't say anything, somehow, about kicking back with the three centuries. Not she. And he slipped her a thousand more in no time."

"Well," said the Head Barber, seeming to think it was too hot to discuss money matters, "what about it?"

"George," answered the Manicure Lady, "it doesn't seem right. Why can't I be like one of them girls? I guess I ain't lucky enough to be."

"You mean you're lucky enough not to be," said the Head Barber.

VERY HAPPY.

"Are they happily married?"

"Yes, indeed. He thinks almost as much of her lap dog as she does herself."

YOU CUR, HAVE YOU NO MERCY? I'LL NEVER MARRY YOU
HERSHFIELD

It is pleasant enough to lie in a meadow and enjoy the country air and sunshine, but not when you are tightly bound and a reaper is headed straight in your direction. Such is the terrible plight of Desperate Desmond, and aboard the reaper is Claude Eclaire, whom Desmond has wronged so cruelly. Ah, well, every dog has his day.

Claude Eclaire is naturally of a kindly disposition, but he realizes that if Rosamond is to be free from persecution Desmond must die. A man will do anything for the girl he loves, especially if she asks him to do something that he wants to do anyway. So Claude runs the reaping machine straight for the villainous Desmond.

But stay! Two tramps have chosen the tall grass as a resting place, and they are now disturbed by the approaching reaper. Growling at their interrupted rest, for no one ever gets so tired as the man who never does anything, the tramps begin to sneak through the grass in front of the deadly reaper, and now we shall see that even a tramp's actions may influence the lives of others.

Soon the tramps come upon the villain. They do not know he is a villain, despite his evil expression. It is not safe to judge character entirely from a stranger's face. If we did, many an honest man would be in jail. So the tramps set Desmond free for other villainies. Had these peasants but known, they would have gone to work rather than have aided one so low.

Imagine the surprise of Claude when, instead of ending Desmond's career, he has to surrender his Rosamond. For once words fail our hero, and all he can say is "Oh!" What a useful word that is. We say "Oh!" when told of deaths, births or marriages. "Oh!" is comment upon a new hat or a new President. So it is natural enough for Claude to cry "Oh!" Indeed, what else could he say?

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, as the tables are turned. He has Claude clamped into a bale of hay. The villain then sets fire to the hay and puts it adrift on a raft. If Claude is not burned to death, apparently he will be drowned. Frankly we see no way out of it for him, and the artist says we must wait for to-morrow's pictures to learn the hero's fate.

At Mrs. Dolan's Boarding House

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

In Which Ruth Goes to a Rehearsal with Trixie Mansfield

"LOOK out, there's a step here! Don't stumble."

Ruth felt her way carefully along the dark passage. A sudden turn brought her to the back of a deep stage littered with scenery. The curtain was up, and far out in front could be seen the empty house, dark and ghostlike, with its rows of white-covered seats.

"Never been behind the scenes before?" laughed Trixie Mansfield, who had invited Ruth to see a rehearsal of "The Wife's Sacrifice," a four-act melodrama which was to be put on the road in the Fall, and in which she had a part.

"Never," answered Ruth. "Oh, I had no idea it was like this."

A small group of people were at the other end of the stage. Two of them were in their shirt sleeves. One of the girls was calmly powdering her nose with a soiled piece of chamois and a pocket mirror.

A stout, florid man, who Ruth learned later was the stage manager, now called out, "Let's get busy here. We're late as it is."

"Would you rather stay back here or go out front?" Miss Mansfield asked Ruth hurriedly.

"Oh, anywhere—just so I'm not in the way."

The Rehearsal

"Well, then, run down in front; you can see better there. Here, this way! The steps are right there back of the boxes."

Ruth made her way down to the front of the house and slipped into a seat near the centre of the orchestra.

One of the men drew a couch, a couple of chairs and a table toward the front of the stage. A desk telephone instrument was placed on the table and also a newspaper, a dagger-like knife and a small brass box.

"Now, then, all ready, Miss Roberts!"

Miss Roberts drew the hat pins from a big sailor hat, threw it back of some scenery, came forward and took a chair by the table. She opened the newspaper and pretended to read. The stage manager touched a bell at the side of the stage. A young girl who had been standing at the back with a bandbox in her hand came forward. Miss Roberts looked up.

"Oh, my hat from Florrine's. Open it, Marie."

Marie, who was evidently the maid, opened the box, and Miss Roberts stooped over and took out an imaginary hat. She walked over as though to a mirror, with her hands to her head as if she were trying on a hat.

Ruth was conscious of a distinct feeling of surprise at the crudeness of it all. Why not have the hat and the mirror? This trying on of an imaginary hat before an imaginary mirror seemed so foolish. Then one of the men came forward and threw a hat and stick on the couch.

"Oh, dear, this is my new hat from Florrine's. Isn't it lovely?"

"Very," without looking toward her.

Miss Roberts whirled around.

"Howard, why aren't you interested in anything any more?"

"I said your hat was very pretty. What did you expect of me—raptures?"

"I expect you to take some interest in your wife and your home. You haven't——"

"Hold on there," interrupted the stage manager. "You cross to the right on those lines, and you don't say them like that. 'I expect you to take some interest in your wife and your home.' You are trying to express there a real indignation, not a nagging disposition. Now, try it again, and don't say it so snappishly."

"I expect you to take some real interest in your wife and your——"

"No—no—now you're overdoing it! Wait, try that scene over from where Davis enters the room. Now!"

The man took up the hat and stick, walked to the back of the stage and forward again, throwing them on the couch as before.

"Dear, this is my new hat from Florrine's. Isn't it lovely?"

"Very."

"Howard, why aren't you interested in anything any more?"

"I said your hat was very pretty. What do you expect of me—raptures?"

"I expect you to take some interest in your wife and your home. You haven't for months. I can't understand——"

"That won't do—that won't do! You don't get those lines at all."

Again and again he made them go over that scene until to Ruth the words sounded wholly meaningless.

Then they went on, only to be stopped at another line to which Miss Roberts did not give the right expression.

A Disillusion

Ruth watched it all with breathless interest. And yet it was for her an evening of disillusionment. All that she had thought natural and spontaneous on the stage, she now realized was the work of drudgery and sordid details.

"Well, I guess that'll be all now," yawned the stage manager, looking at his watch. "Everybody here to-morrow at 7:30 sharp! We'll leave this and begin on the second act."

"How did you like it?" asked Trixie when she came down to the orchestra after Ruth, and led the way to the side door.

"Oh, so much! Only I was disappointed in not seeing you."

"Well, you never can count on old Kaufman. Sometimes he'll rush through the whole play without a stop, and again he'll keep you harping on one scene the whole evening. You can come some evening next week, if you want, when the thing's in better shape, and see it all."

"Oh, I'd love to."

"All right; here's our car."

It was almost 1 when they reached Mrs. Dolan's.

And Ruth was soon asleep, dreaming that she had the leading part in a play and that the stage manager was forcing her to go over and over the lines, and that each time she grew more self-conscious and said them with less expression.

PART ONE.

THE fog groped and felt its way along the water front. Then it crept up to the throat of the city, like a gray band, and strangled Broadway into an ominous quietness.

It tightened its grip, as the day grew older, leaving the cross streets from Union Square to the Battery clotted with congested traffic. It brought on an untimely protest of blinking street lamps, as uncannily bewildering as the midday cock-crowing of a solar eclipse.

It caused the vague and shadowy walls of skyscrapers to blossom into countless yellow window tiers, as close-packed as the scales of a snake.

Bells sounded from gloom-wrapt shipping along the saw-tooth line of the river ships, tolling the watches and falling silent and tolling again, as they might have tolled in mid-ocean, or on some lonely waterway that led to the uttermost ends of the earth.

Now and then, out of the distance, a river ferry or a car float tug could be heard growling and whimpering for room, as it wrangled over its right-of-way. Everything moved slowly through the muffled streets.

Carriages crept across the sepulchral quietness with a strange and uncouth reverence, like tourists through a catacomb. Surface cars, crawling funereally forward, felt their way with gong-strokes, as blind men feel their way with stick-taps.

An occasional taxicab, swinging tentatively out of a side street, slewed and skidded in the greasy mud. Lonely drivers watched from their seats, watched like sea captains from bridge-ends when ice has invaded their sea lanes.

Under the gas-lamps, dulled to a reddish yellow, passed a thin scattering of pedestrians. A touch of desolation clung about each figure that groped its way through the short-vistaed street, as though the thoroughfare it trod were a lonely moraine and the figure itself the last man that walked a ruined world. It was the worst fog that New York had known for years; the city lay under it like a mummy swathed in grey.

Had Missed His Way

Yet the gloom seemed to crown it with a new wonder, to endow it with a new dignity. That all too shallow tongue of land that is lipped by the East and North rivers took on strange and undreamt-of distances. It lay engulfed in twilight mysteries, enriched with unlooked-for possibilities.

Its narrow acres of brick and stone and asphalt became something unbounded and infinite, as bewildering and wide as the open Atlantic. It seemed to harbor fantastic potentialities. It seemed to release the spirit of romance, as moonlight unfetters a lover's lips.

Yet Lingg, the wireless operator of the Laminian, became more and more alarmed at the opacity of this fog. He felt, as he burrowed mole-like across the mist-blanketed city, that he had been a fool to leave the ship. He should have listened to reason.

And now he had missed his way. He was lost in the very heart of that vast and undecipherable wilderness, which had always filled him with a vague fear, even in the open sunlight, where its serrated skyline reminded him of a waiting trap-jaw.

He was hopelessly at sea in the silence which surrounded him, overawed by the quietness which the turn of a street-corner might convert into some perilous ambuscade. Heilig, the engineer, had been right. He'd been a fool to come ashore.

He recalled, a little enviously, the figure of the engineer, the morose and lank and slatternly figure in ragged carpet-slippers, leaning against the ship's rail and smoking the long-stemmed German pipe with its blue china bowl.

He remembered the engineer's impassive stare and his almost placid grunt of protest as he wheeled slowly round towards the solid land that he always seemed to hate.

"Where yuh off to, son?" he asked, as Lingg dropped to the splintered string-piece of the wharf. The Laminian was chafing and fretting against that string-piece just as his own soul had been chafing and fretting against the desolation of her empty decks.

"Ashore," Lingg answered, resolutely enough, yet against all the voices of better judgment.

"Wimmin?" demanded the laconic figure against the rail.

"No!" exploded the impatient youth.

Sick of Ship

"Then what yuh after?" persisted his gloomy interlocutor.

"What am I after?" echoed the other, having no answer ready.

"What d'yuh want with all that?" demanded the engineer, with a contemptuous pipe-wave that embraced the entire island of Manhattan.

"I guess I want to mind my own business," was the reproving answer. It was followed by a contemplative eye-blink or two from the fan in the carpet slippers. But the disgust did not go out of his face.

"No good comes o' knowing hell-holes like this," he at last averred, with a slow and sagacious side-wag of his head. He spat into the slip water; it was a rite of his infinite contempt.

"I'm not going beyond Broadway," the half-repentant Lingg stopped to explain, marvelling at that strange and lonely sea man's fixed distrust of the solid land.

He did not think it worth while to enlarge on how sick he was of the ship stink and the quietness, of the fumes of rotting fruit, of the heavy musk-smell of harbor water and the febrile rattle and clatter of donkey engines.

"Yuh'll find bad enough b'tween here and Broadway," avowed the placid misanthrope at the ship's rail, contemplating his pipe-smoke as though it were incense rising before the epitomized wisdom of all the ages.

But Lingg was not altogether looking for the bad. He had been remembering how one of the junior officers of the Pretoria, when in port, spent his two riotous days riding up and down in the Fifth Avenue 'buses, the delirious 'buses, which he described as "bee-hives of swarming beauty," where he was ignored and elbowed and walked over by "the finest women who ever wore feathers," to his hungering heart's content!

And Lingg, too, was hungering for some glimpse of life beyond that of a dirty fore-deck; for a sight of faces less satyr-like than that of a brandy-steeped sea captain. He wanted to see light and color and movement. The unpurged emotional tracts of youth ached for some undiscerned adventure.

The Girl

But above all he was swayed by a wordless, yet none the less compelling hunger to behold the faces of women and girls. Some subliminal sex-hunger, after so many empty days at sea, made him long for that vague upper world which seemed embodied in this very word, Girls. He wanted to see them, good or bad, with painted faces or pure. It scarcely mattered, so long as he could look at them.

They would all be goddesses to him, Olympian beings who breathed some diviner air, trailing clouds of mystery after their most casual footsteps. He did not ask to walk or speak with them. Their lowliest skirt-swish would seem only too like the ruffle of angel wings. He merely wanted to brush against them, indeterminately, in the city's crowded places, to watch their coming and going, to hear their occasional voices, to let his eyes dwell on their faces as a seaman looks at passing land-lights.

For Lingg was still young, clean-living and clean-thoughted beyond the ways of the sailor. Heilig's assistant on the Laminian had more than once spoken of him as "Mealy-mouth."

And then, amazingly enough, came the girl herself, without sign of warning.

Where she fluttered or fell from he scarcely knew. It was somewhere in one of the quieter side-streets, and they were standing face to face, almost, when he looked up and saw her.

Had he seen a mermaid over the ship's rail it could not have startled him more. There was no evading the situation; there was no chance of being mistaken.

It was Adventure, in answer to his prayer. It was Romance, as he had asked. And he had never so much as clapped eyes on her before.

Nor was her face a painted face. There was no betraying cupid-bow streak of carmine on the [illegible] lips. There was no barbaric black gum on the undrooping eyelashes, no tell-tale blue paint on the eyelids.

Spoke His Name

There were no disquieting blandishments, no sidelong and predatory glances, no ensnaring simulation of tender levity. His startled eyes could detect no granite savagery under the velvet of her unconcern.

She seemed merely woman incarnate to him, the sort of woman he had sometimes dreamt about on tropic nights when the Southern Cross swung low to the skyline.

"You are Gustav Lingg," she said quietly, as plain as day, while his wide eyes still studied every tint and shadow and line of her untroubled face. On that face he seemed to see nothing but a gentle yet determined abstraction.

"Y—yes," he stammered vacuously, as though her statement had been a question. A faint tingle of something that was neither fear nor delight went needling up and down his backbone.

"I want to talk to you," the woman said, quite gravely. "I must talk to you—alone."

He knew that she had turned and joined him as he moved wonderingly forward with his staring eyes still on her.

Then the futility, the hopelessness, the impossibility of it all suddenly came home to him. He was conscious of a sinking feeling in the pit of his stomach.

Courage sank away from him, confidence sucked out of him, like water out of an unplugged bath bowl.

If she had only stood before him less alluring, less Olympian in her loveliness, he might have been less bewildered. If she had been the other kind, openly and unequivocally, he might have grown less afraid of her.

But he felt and knew it was a mistake, a foolish and colossal mistake. A vague and slowly mounting fear took the place of his earlier astonishment.

The city itself had already intimidated him. He remembered the engineer's opprobrious summing up of its perils. There was something amiss, terribly amiss.

Turned and Fled

He raised his hat from his head awkwardly, muttering he scarcely knew what, as he heard her voice again. He backed away from her as she essayed to draw nearer, and stumbled, almost drunkenly, while she stood regarding him in open wonder.

Then he turned and fled from her, fled from her, abashed and tingling, fled from her blindly, like a field-mouse from a coiled blacksnake.

He did not stop until he had rounded a street corner. He felt, as he did so, that he was demanding his manhood before some possible high adventure.

He vaguely suspected that one of life's vast occasions had slipped away from him unrecognized. But he was still afraid, foolishly afraid. He was glad to dip deeper and deeper into the city, as though it were a cleansing bath that might wash away his lubberly awkwardness.

He was glad when the fog crept into the streets and helped to obliterate him and his shame. He was glad to wander unknown and unrecognized about the grey-draped solitude that engulfed him.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE ONE TO BELIEVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a young man two years my senior, who says he loves me, and could love no one else better.

He also talks to a girl friend of mine, with whom I am not on speaking terms, who is trying to separate us.

He continually tells me he does not care for her. She also tells other friends of mine that, at certain times, she goes out with him, which he denies.

Now, dear Miss Fairfax, would you kindly give me your advice? I do not know whether to write to this friend and tell her about it, or if I should tell him plainly how I feel about it. It annoys me very much, and it would break my heart to lose him. P. L. K.

MY dear girl, why should you believe a young woman with whom you are not on friendly terms, rather than the man you are to marry?

If you love him, you should have implicit confidence in him. However, you must be frank and tell him that these stories have disturbed you very much. Ask him if he cannot prevent the young woman from spreading these false reports.

Anty Drudge posts Mrs. Youngbride.
Mrs. Youngbride—"I tell you, Anty Drudge, my hands are not white and smooth like they were before I was married. I'm happy with Jack, but it's not so nice to do one's own housework. It's the putting them in hot water that makes them red and breaks the nails."
Anty Drudge—"Quite true, my dear, and the way to remedy that is to use Fels-Naptha in cool or lukewarm water for all your housework—for washing dishes, windows, floors, all house-cleaning, and washing clothes. It will save your hands and the work will be much easier."
A soap that spoils hands and temper can't be good for clothes. You need a soap that won't hurt any one of the three!
How many racking hours you've spent at the wash-tub! And while you were wearing away your strength, you were wearing out the clothes! That's the KILLING way of washing clothes.
But now the Fels-Naptha soap way: Soap the clothes with Fels-Naptha, let them stand for 30 minutes in cool or lukewarm water. Rub lightly, rinse and hang out to dry.
You'll find that Fels-Naptha soap has done the work. Try it next Monday. Best for colored clothes as for white things. Follow the simple directions on the red and green wrapper, and you will be convinced.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

NEW YORK, July 10.—The stock market opened strong to-day with practically everyone of the leaders in both the railroad and industrial departments showing good fractional gains over Saturday's close.

Reports of rains throughout sections of the West proved a bull card among traders generally and dispelled practically all fears that had been entertained over the government crop report to be issued this afternoon.

The favorable turn in crop prospects was given substantial reflection in the initial stock prices. Canadian Pacific scored the greatest opening gain, 2¾ points. Advances of a point or more were made in both Union Pacific and Atchison.

The opening prices of some of the other leading issues follow: Steel common, 79¼, up ⅛ point; Amalgamated Copper, 69⅞, up ⅛; Smelters, 80⅝, up ⅜; Reading, 15⅝, up ⅝; Pennsylvania, 125⅛, up ⅛; Erie common, 37⅝, up ⅜; Erie preferred, 59¼, up ⅛; B. R. T., 82⅝, up ⅛; Atchison, 112⅝, up ⅝; Southern Pacific, 122½, unchanged; Southern Railway, 31⅝, up ⅜; Missouri Pacific, 48⅝, up ¼; Union Pacific, 187⅛, up 1 point. Evidences of renewed pool activities were found in the action of several of the specialties in the early trading. The Curb market opened quiet and steady, with Standard Oil quoted at 640 bid, 645 asked, and American Tobacco at 305 bid and 309 asked. American securities were generally firm in the London market. Covering in Canadian Pacific caused a spurt in the price of that stock there.

FORMER JOCKEY SHOT IN ROW OVER JEWEL

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 10.—Thomas Dolan, twenty-six years old, formerly a well-known jockey, was shot and killed by J. S. Hughes, a merchant and planter of Haynes, Ark., in a room occupied by Hughes in a hotel. The shooting followed a dispute over a diamond stud that Hughes says he missed.

'SCAMP' MONTGOMERY IS DEAD IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, July 10.—Harry Montgomery, the comedian, better known under the playfully-applied nickname of "Scamp" Montgomery, and a brother of Dave Montgomery of Montgomery and Stone, died at his home here after a short illness. He was born in St. Joseph, Mo., forty-two years ago and had been on the stage for many years.

FALL RIVER BOAT HITS SCHOONER

When the steamer Commonwealth of the Fall River line, bound from Newport to New York, reached the latter city early to-day the passengers, who included 900 Elks, told of a thrilling experience at 2 a. m., when they collided off Race Rock, in the sound, with the schooner James M. Gifford. The bow of the Commonwealth was damaged as was that of the Gifford. The latter is now on her way to Noank, Ct., for repairs.

When the accident occurred, according to Captain W. R. Appleby, of the Commonwealth, his boat was speeding along in a fog so dense that it was impossible for the man at the wheel to see more than one hundred yards ahead. Suddenly a white fishing schooner loomed up straight ahead. It was impossible for the larger steamer to change her course in time and the vessels collided.

When the crash came nearly all of the Commonwealth's 1,200 passengers were on deck owing to the intense heat. The shock of the impact was felt from bow to stern and for a few minutes great excitement reigned among the passengers. The lifeboats were made ready and the steamer laid to to discover what damage had been done to herself and her victim. The fishing vessel could be dimly seen in the fog and the Commonwealth officers called through her megaphone whether she needed assistance. They received no reply for fully half an hour. Then the reply came from the smaller boat that no assistance was needed. It was reported by several passengers that when the boats collided a man was seen to jump from the deck of the fishing boat into the sea.

The Elks on board the Commonwealth were all bound for the Grand Lodge festivities at Atlantic City, N. J., during the coming week.

SEALSHIPT OYSTER CO. ACQUIRES NEW PLANTS

The Sealshipt Oyster System has sold to Hornblower & Weeks and Bond & Goodwin an issue of $2,500,000 three-year 5 per cent. gold bonds.

The purpose of the issue is to finance in a more permanent form the acquisitions of oyster producing plants, which have made the company the largest single owner of oyster properties as well as the largest shipper in the world. In addition to paying for the property the proceeds of this bond issue retire all bills payable, all notes maturing prior to 1918, and provide cash working capital of over $500,000.

The company is capitalized for $2,500,000 cumulative preferred stock on which dividends at the rate of 7 per cent. are being paid. Earnings for the fiscal year ending April 30, 1911, were derived from less than 30 per cent. of the production of the present properties, as the majority of the purchases were not made until last January. A summary of the earning power of the various properties which make up the company's present holdings places the net earnings for next season at about $500,000, against which are fixed charges of $178,875.

HULL MAN STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE DIES

Struck by an automobile owned and operated by Philip H. Hatchard of Waveland, late yesterday afternoon, Thomas Craigin, a crossing tender and well-known character of Hull, died without regaining consciousness at the Allerton Hospital early to-day. Hatchard is the son of P. H. Hatchard, chairman of the Board of Health.

Enter the Great $10,000 PROVERB CONTEST To-day

Back Numbers and Proverb Books Now Ready

Anyone living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter the AMERICAN'S $10,000 Contest to-day, to-morrow, or any time during the period of the contest.

The back numbers of any pictures which may be desired may be obtained at the Contest Department, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., at the regular rates of the AMERICAN. Sunday back numbers are 5c (plus return postage). Daily back numbers are 1c (plus return postage).

This allows anyone in New England, at any time, to partake in the enjoyable competition which is being conducted by this newspaper for the benefit of its readers.

Moreover, if anyone is "stumped" by one of the pictures, there is the AMERICAN'S PROVERB BOOK, which is always ready to give immediate and authoritative assistance. It contains more than 3,000 proverbs, including all that will be used in the contest.

It is attractively and neatly arranged.

A copy of the PROVERB BOOK will be mailed to any address upon receipt of a money order for 25c at the "Proverb Contest Department, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

For the protection of contestants in the Proverb Contest, the AMERICAN is compelled to repeat again and again the injunction: Do not be misled by the fictitious offerings of unauthorized persons who pretend to sell PROVERB BOOKS, answer blanks and correct solutions in connection with this Proverb Contest.

Pay no attention whatsoever to any advertisements placed in other newspapers than the AMERICAN. Ignore their circular letters absolutely.

It is utterly impossible for anyone to know anything at all about the correct solutions of the puzzle pictures. Attempts to induce contestants to buy "solutions" are recognizable instantly as fakers pure and simple.

The only authorized PROVERB BOOK is that which is obtained directly through the Boston AMERICAN.

Everyone is urged to take advantage of the opportunities offered by this contest.

The time of entering makes absolutely no difference in the winning of the prizes. Those who enter now will have just as good a chance of winning one of these magnificent prizes as those who entered earlier.

For that matter the contest will be open until the publication of the last puzzle picture. But in this, as in any other enterprise of any sort, it is a good plan to give yourself ample time.

Now would be an ideal time to enter.

By doing so no one would have to wait long for a decision, and yet would have more than enough time to give every puzzle picture careful consideration.

The contest is really only just getting under way, and by obtaining the back numbers now anyone will be able to get them all solved and at the same time keep up very easily with the pictures that continue to be published day by day in these columns.

Conditions of the Contest Read Carefully

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in longhand either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participants in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Each contestant or any or all members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In case there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answers submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

In case contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire St., Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The Editor of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

Uncle Sam Is Indeed a Rich Old Gentleman. He Is Getting Richer All the Time

What a Pity His Riches Can't Be Spent in the Best Way, for the Biggest Number and a Better Future!

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

Every day Uncle Sam gets richer. Every baby born means another citizen to work, produce and pay taxes. A telegram from Washington giving "official figures subject to revision" tells that the treasury year which is just ended shows a continued increase in the wealth of the central government.

Officials in charge of the public money found that they had a surplus of forty-five millions and more, which is comfortable, and an excess of more than thirty-one millions over all disbursements, including the cost of the Panama Canal.

It is a rich and a lucky country that can build big things like the Panama Canal, and nourish grafters like some of our Senators and others, and still have money to spare.

Let us, however, forget for a minute the grafters, forget even the most recently announced piece of graft by which certain gentlemen were going to buy in Washington eight million dollars' worth of land, putting a good deal of the money in their own pockets.

Let us just now consider what a rich country this is, what it might do for its inhabitants if those inhabitants had enough intelligence and determination, WHAT IT WILL DO SOME DAY WHEN INTELLIGENCE AND DETERMINATION COME.

Without any trouble, without any special taxation, the nation gathers in seven hundred millions—and, of course, this has nothing to do with the thousands of millions in taxes collected by the States, big cities, towns and villages.

The internal revenue receipts alone this year were fourteen millions above the official estimate.

More than three hundred and twenty-two millions came in from internal revenue, more than three hundred and thirteen millions from customs house receipts.

All of this money will go out again, except, perhaps, some slight surplus—and what will the people have to show for it!

What might not the country do for to-day and for the future if this money were spent wisely.

What could be done with the hundreds of millions we spend for fighting ships and fighting men!

What enormous revenues we could raise, what wonders achieve if we only knew enough as a nation to spend wisely and honestly!

Instead of raising seven hundred millions from the internal revenue and the custom receipts, the Federal government could as easily raise seventeen hundred millions—and there would be no complaint from the people, if the money were wisely spent.

Think what it would mean if the great wealth of this country were used not for armies and navies getting ready for wars, not for grafting enterprises, but for the people and the country!

What a nation this would be if every year the Federal government, the State and city governments should compete with each other in the wise expenditure of revenue:

Fighting disease with science.

Fighting poverty with education.

Draining the swamps, irrigating the deserts.

Building railroads where they are needed to scatter the people, instead of nearly always building to keep them crowded where they are.

Building homes and giving the people a chance to own them.

Opening up new areas of land and giving the people a chance to own that land, with machinery and other necessary appliances.

This is a great country, a wonderful big farm with nearly a hundred millions of people anxious for a chance and willing to do their share, hungry for wise leadership, unlimited in its wealth already, marvellous in its possibilities for the future.

What a country it will be when wise leaders shall arise as great in the work of construction as the old heroes were in the work of military destruction!

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

WANTS SUNDAY BASEBALL

Editor AMERICAN:

I would like to ask why Boston cannot have Sunday baseball. Winthrop and other cities in this State have it, why not Boston? A BASEBALL ENTHUSIAST.

JEWS GOOD SOLDIERS

Editor AMERICAN:

As one of your Jewish readers, I wish to write a few lines about the statement of Colonel Garrard, of the United States Army, that is still fresh in the minds of all.

"I would not desire a Jew in my command," he said, "as an officer and a social and personal associate."

And here are President Taft's words, that went with his order to the Secretary of War to administer a severe public reprimand:

"It is difficult for me to read the endorsement of Colonel Garrard with patience and without condemnatory words that had better not be written."

Now, there is absolutely not one fact to substantiate the prejudice of Colonel Garrard against the Jew as a soldier. History shows that there is neither unwillingness nor unfitness on the part of the Jew to do his full share on the field of patriotic duty. In this regard it may be interesting to give a few facts, condensed from a comprehensive article in the Funk & Wagnalls Jewish Encyclopaedia on "The Jew in the United States Army."

Many Jews served in the Revolutionary War. The names of forty-six are known, twenty-four of these being officers, and at that time there were scarcely 3,000 Jews in North America. In the War of 1812 forty-four Jews took part. In the Mexican War sixty Jews served, twelve of them officers.

During the Civil War the Jews served brilliantly and gallantly. Fourteen families alone contributed fifty-three men to the ranks, and seven men have been traced who received from President Lincoln medals of honor for conspicuous gallantry. Simon Wolf gives a list of Jews serving on the Union and Confederate sides which exhibits nearly 700 officers and a total of 7,878 of other ranks, out of a Jewish population of less than 15,000 souls.

In the war with Spain the American Jews were equally active. It has been asserted that the first volunteer to enroll and the first to fall were alike Jews. It is certain that Jews served in both the army and the navy to an extent beyond their due numerical proportion, and that they behaved with zeal and valor.

If every gentile would read this article in the Jewish Encyclopaedia on "The Jews as Soldiers in All the Armies of the World," it would do more than any other thing to dispel this absurd prejudice and to convince them of the bravery and the loyalty of this people. Respectfully yours,

JACOB A. EINSTEIN.

TRAIN SERVICE AND CHARGES

Editor AMERICAN:

The writer as well as many other traveling men is pleased to see you get after the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad who, through the Boston & Maine, are trying to block the Grand Trunk railroad in all their New England moves.

Here are a few facts that the "public" may be interested in. The Grand Trunk railroad in Canada runs a train daily from Montreal to Toronto, 335 miles, in 7 hours and 20 minutes, which is an average speed of 45 miles an hour. There is no extra charge to ride on this, their fastest train, unless one wishes to occupy the Pullman.

The New York Central railroad runs a train (Empire State Express) daily between Buffalo and New York city, 440 miles, in 8 hours and 30 minutes, an average speed of 50 miles an hour, and there is no extra charge to ride on this train either. Between Boston and New York the fastest New York, New Haven & Hartford trains are the 5 hour ones, and as the distance is 236 miles, the average speed is only 47 miles per hour. On this train one is obliged to pay $2 extra to ride on it. How long are Boston people going to stand for this?

Would we not have better service and cheaper rates with a competitive line to New York city? It seems as if the New York, New Haven & Hartford had better try and improve their service, not only over their own lines, but over the Boston & Maine lines, instead of trying to thwart all the plans of a so-called "foreign road," that is aiming to build up and help New England as they have done in their own country, Canada.

JUST KEEP YOUR DISTANCE.- PICK SOME FLOWERS!
YOU ARE POSITIVE-LY CRUEL BRUTAL!
PICK SOME FLOWERS FOR ME IF YOU LOVE ME SO—
IF I CAN NOT STEAL A KISS I SHALL FORCE ONE FROM YOU!
NO! NO! NO! NO! NO! NO! NO! NO!
THE JAILS ARE FULL OF THIEVES AND HOLD-UP-MEN WHO EARLY IN LIFE WERE DENIED THAT WHICH THEY CRAVED
MY DEAR BOY, I HOPE YOU WILL CURB YOUR DESIRE TO STEAL
YOU WOULDN'T WANT TO SEE ME A DESPERADO. OH! LOOK! HERE IS SOME IVY! DEAR!
GRACIOUS! WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH YOUR FACE?
NOTHING! WHY! YOU OUGHT TO SEE YOUR OWN FACE! YOU'RE A SIGHT!
SAY! THIS IS FIERCE! I'M FRIGHTENED LET'S GO HOME!
MY FACE FEELS LIKE A POTATO! WE MUST HAVE BEEN BITTEN BY A BUG—LESH GO THOME! I THEEL FAWFUL!

Antediluvian Rag

BY · MORTON · BIRGE

"The time to learn dancing is any age you happen to be."—Joseph Lee at Charities Conference.

I'm ninety years old, but I hear that Joe Lee
Says any old age that you happen to be
Is the time to begin. So, look out, you may see
Some bounding Terpsichore business by me.
Now, all that I need
To show two-stepping speed
Is an Antediluvian Rag.
A nonogenarian Rag.
Will someone who knows me
Please quickly compose me
This Antediluvian Rag.

A rollicking, frollicking Rag,
A clickety-clackety,
Stir your rheumaticky
Joints to a-jigging old Rag.
A fossilized, bald-headed Rag,
A driving and striving
And highly reviving,
A dead-or-aliving old Rag.

Oh, Wow! won't you write me,
Dictate or indite me
That Antediluvian Rag?
I almost can feel it.
You make it— I'll steal it—
That Antedilu vian Rag!
"The time to learn dancing," says Mister Joe Lee,
"Is any old age that you happen to be."
It's me for the giddy Terpsichore gag.
Come on with your Antediluvian Rag.

When the Airships Begin to Fight

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

ONE gets a foretaste of the sort of description that will characterize the works of the historians of future wars in reading what Professor J. J. Welch said in a recent address to the Institution of British Naval Architects about the coming battles between ocean dreadnoughts and aerial fleets. It is evident that nothing that the world has ever beheld can be compared to these terrific contests, whose phantasms play upon the horizon of advancing time.

Professor Welch's subject was the problem of size in battleships, and his hearers must have felt a certain thrill when they found "the additional menace of missiles from dirigibles or aeroplanes" suddenly playing a leading part in the discussion. Increase the size of your battleships and you offer a surer target for the airships—such was, in effect, Professor Welch's argument.

Then he went into some startling particulars, and, plain and unimaginative as his statements and figures are, the discerning eye can behold marvelous panorama unfolding itself behind them.

At a height of one mile an airship would be reasonably out of range of high-angle fire. A bomb containing a hundred pounds of explosives, if simply dropped from that height, would take about twenty seconds to reach its aim, and would acquire a striking velocity of 500 feet per second. In the twenty seconds during which the bomb would be in the air a sixteen-knot battleship would advance about 540 feet. This motion would, of course, be allowed for by the aerial marksman, as a hunter shoots straight ahead of a flying bird. The only hope of escape for the battleship would lie in throwing her helm hard over at the instant the missile was discharged. But could that instant be determined? And, even if it were, the ship, if of large size, could not, according to the calculation of Professor Welch, in the twenty seconds of delay allowed it, carry the whole area of its deck out of the line of fire of the coming missile. A heavy ship cannot whirl on its heel like a fox, or dive like a duck.

But then, says Professor Welch, arrangements are being made for dropping a number of missiles simultaneously from a single dirigible—and suppose half a dozen airships should unite in this sort of battle!

It would be like a party of hunters on snowshoes surrounding and peppering a moose struggling helpless in a drift!

The professor's next words are unemotionally matter of fact in form, but what a meaning lurks between the lines! "It seems reasonable to suppose that the best protection from such attacks will be found in counter-attacks by the same type of airship, associated with high-angle gun-fire."

There you have the whole amazing picture of the warfare of the future, as already it presents itself to the practical mind of the naval expert—the steel-clad leviathans of the deep, beset by swarming enemies in the air, become the marks for plunging missiles; the water around them foaming with bursting bombs; striving to strike back at their aerial foes with high-angle guns, whose discharge shatters their own decks; and, finally, if they survive, seeing the battle decided by their own consorts in the air. Evidently the sea fleets of the near future must be attended by atmospheric protectors, as now they have their swarms of torpedo boat destroyers.

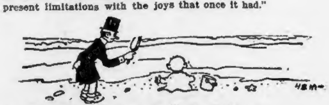
It remains to be seen what military experts will have to say about the fate of armies attacked, in a similar way, from overhead. But the terrible picturesqueness of future war histories is plainly enough foreseen.

Taught by a Child

By N. P. BABCOCK

A VERY learned gentleman, Professor Daniel North,
Upon the sand at Revere Beach was walking back and forth,
When he beheld an infant, with a little spade and pail,
Emitting a continuous and quite distressing wail.

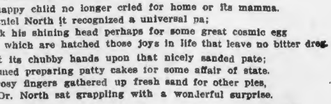
"Dear me!" exclaimed the Ph D., "a most unhappy child;
I wonder if by any means its mind could be beguiled
From what is very clearly some association sad
Of present limitations with the joys that once it had."



He sat himself upon the beach beside the weeping babe,
And sought to interest it in the movement of a wave.
His hat removed, his head became an object bald and bland,
Inviting salutation from a shovelful of sand.

The happy child no longer cried for home or its mamma.
In Daniel North it recognized a universal pa;
It took his shining head perhaps for some great cosmic egg
From which are hatched those joys in life that leave no bitter dreg.

It put its chubby hands upon that nicely sanded pate;
It seemed preparing patty cakes for some affair of state.
The rosy fingers gathered up fresh sand for other pies,
And Dr. North sat grappling with a wonderful surprise.



Thro' some five dozen years of life he'd garnered in his head
The essence of philosophy from masters quick and dead;
He traced each human action and emotion to a source
Of ganglionic tissue and the reflex nerves, of course.

But here was an emotion he had never met before—
Preposterous devotion to a being not yet four!
And when the blushing mother of the child dragged it away
Professor North sat silent for the rest of that whole day.
